"Everything passed off beautifully," officials said, in Massachusetts, where night before last three were killed in the electric chair, and in Delaware, where a white woman was hanged for the first time in the state's history, and her son hanged with her.

Everything "passed off well" when the five "souls," which we assume murderers like others possess, passed on into mysterious space.

That the white woman should have died more courageously than her son, who followed her to the gallows, surprises no one. Women are more courageous than men.

That the three young murderers in Massachusetts died in abject terror is not surprising. Some that kill lightly die full of self pity.

Abe Faber, a young student who had decided to take the "short road to wealth" and was known for a little while as the "quick trigger" man, took death "harder" than the other two. The banging of two doors, telling him that his fellow murderers had gone to the "hot seat" ahead of him, upset his nerves.

A student of Technology, Faber had boasted of a method to "resist the electric chair." Whatever it was, it did not work. One shock of 2000 volts, another of 2000 volts, a third of 1900 volts, overcame that "device."

You might be prepared for abject cowardice displayed by cold-blooded murderers, but you would hardly be prepared for a 5000 crowd of men and women struggling to approach the prison walls and howling:

"Let them die! Let them die!"

The crowd had waited hours for the execution and roared in true mob fury.

Some future candidates for the electric chair or the gallows were probably included in that mob.

Reporters asked President Roosevelt, "What is the social objective of your administration?" and he answered, with permission to quote him.

Anybody not pleased with the reply should, in the language of extreme conservatism, go back to the country that he came from."

What any honest government of any country would do: to try to increase the security and the happiness of a larger number of people in all occupations of life and in all parts of the country; to give them more of the good things of life; to give them a greater distribution, not only of wealth in the narrow terms, but

TODY WEST ..... — 4.30

Pana Franka, never far from the pace, came to the outside of Chimney Top in the stretch, responded gamely to hard urging and outlasted the pacemaker at the end. Chimney Top showed good speed, was wheeled several times in the backstretch, and gamely battled to the end, outstaying Sun Surrender, and nearly holding on to second money. Tody West moved up gradually on the outside in the last five-sixteenths and finished willingly in the drive. Cash Mover showed speed, saved ground at the stretch turn, but faltered at the end. Fast Move outran early, came with belated speed in the last quarter mile. Tiger John was well placed in the first quarter mile, dropped back steadily thereafter. Air Line tired.

TWENTY KARAT ..... — — 4.50

Westys Junior, unruly at the post, displayed good speed from the start, fought it out with Paradun all the way, but first three furlongs and, disposing of him, held Paradun safe at the end. Paradun, well placed from the start, continued to with good energy to the close. Twenty Karat displayed good speed and held on well under pressure. Bandy Bill forced the pace of the winner while on the outside and weakened when under the whip. He dropped back and was taken up, coming around in the stretch. Pharatime was never in it. Bidever ran to breaks. Lord Sevenoaks had early speed but was unable to keep pace. Tiring badly.

YANKS CRUSH SOX IN 1ST OF TWIN BILL

By Joe Cashman

Fenway Park, June 8—After dropping the first game 12 to 6, the Red Sox sent Lefty Ostermueller to the hill in an attempt to get an even break for the day.

Lefty Gomez was Manager Joe McCarthy's choice.

Five runs rallies in the second and eighth together with Gehrig's home in the seventh with one on gave the Yanks their 12 runs in the opening game. The Sox used Wes Ferrell, Lefty Hockette and Hal Van Denberg while the Yanks sent Johnny Allen, Walter Brown and Pat Malone to the mound.

Mary Curley Bride in Cathedral Rites

While Mary and Lieutenant-Colonel Donnelly were being joined in marriage by Cardinal O'Connell, a crowd of 15,000 surrounded the edifice.

Notables of the nation, the state and the city witnessed the ceremony and many priests sat within the sanctuary rail.

A nuptial mass, celebrated by Rev. James J. Kelley of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, the bride's pastor, followed the marriage rites.

Arriving at the Cathedral on the arm of her father, Mary smiled and waved to the applauding throng. Many in the crowd shouted their best wishes to her.

GOVERNOR WITH BRIDE

As the wedding guests did not quite fill the Cathedral, which seats about 2000, a few hundred of those who had waited hours to see the bride were permitted to enter at the last moment.

Even in the church, there were "ohs" and "ahs" as women guests saw the bride in her gown of lustrous Duchess satin carrying a gorgeous bridal bouquet of delicate blush orchids and lilies of the valley.

Lieutenant-Colonel Donnelly dressed in morning clothes, offered the bride his arm and together they knelt, and then, with the sunlight beaming on them through tinted panes, they spoke their marriage vows.

MOTHER'S BRIDAL DRESS

The maid of honor, Miss Loretta Brennner, and the best man, John C. Donnelly, received Holy Communion with the bride and bridegroom.

GIRL LEAPS OFF ROOF

A few hours after her patient had died in Cambridge Hospital, Miss Mary McAvoy, 28-year-old graduate nurse, plunged four stories from the roof of a Glenville avenue, Allston apartment house today.

She was rushed to Cambridge City Hospital by police and was found to have suffered a fractured left leg and hip, crushed right ankle and shock. Her name was placed on the danger list.

Police said they found a note which read:

"Forgive me, Grace, I cannot go on." "Mary."

On the back, police said, was the sentence:

"Come up on the roof."

According to Mrs. William Reed, with whom she lived in Mount Auburn street, Cambridge, the girl was special day nurse for a patient in Cambridge Hospital and went on duty at 7 this morning.

She returned home shortly before 10, and said the patient had died, Mrs. Reed said.

According to Miss Mary Johnson, supervisor of nurses at Cambridge Hospital, Miss McAvoy for two weeks has had one of the most difficult cases in the hospital to handle and was special day nurse to a young woman patient, whose name hospital officials would not reveal.

made his own reply but entered into a general defense of Barrymore. R. Dean Warner, attorney for the actor and Hatchner said the answer was Barrymore's own answer "by proxy."

BARRYMORE 'CAPTIVE'

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 8—Charges that Dolores Costello once held her handsome movie actor husband, John Barrymore, "virtual prisoner" aboard their yacht for two months and that he left her to escape her "deadening influence" on his art, were made today in his answer filed in the couple's divorce case.

The answer was filed by Barrymor's business manager, Henry Hotchner.

He was named co-defendant in the case in an amended divorce complaint filed recently by Miss Costello on the supposition that Barrymore had transferred to him large quantities of community property.

Hotchner said Miss Costello held Barrymore captive on the yacht Infanta with women guards and threatened to have him confined upon "false claims of habitual intemperance" when they returned to Los Angeles.

In the answer, Hotchner not only

TWO DROWN IN EXCURSION TRAGEDY

Rockland, Me., June 8—A man and his wife were hurled overboard and drowned today, and 75 other men, women and children were rescued barely in time, when an excursion steamer crashed on a ledge and capsized.

The steamer Castine was en route from Rockland to Vinal Haven with passengers on their way to a Grange picnic.

SCORE INJURED

A score of the passengers were injured and some were taken to hospitals.

Only the timely arrival of the steamer North Haven averted an appalling loss of life.

Omaha Wins Belmont Race

Belmont Park, N. Y., June 8 (INS)—Belair Stud's Omaha followed the path of his great sire, Gallant Fox, by annexing the historic Belmont Stakes here today in addition to his victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes.

He became the third horse ever to capture all three fixtures.

Walter M. Jeffords Fire Thorn finished second and Foxcatcher Farms' Rosemont third.

Omaha paid 7-10, 1-4, out. Fire Thorn paid 7-5, 1-4, and Rosemont was out.

Helen Wills Wins Tourney

By Associated Press

Weybridge, Eng., June 8—Helen Wills Moomey captured the St. George's Hill tennis tournament today, trouncing Mrs. Elsie Goldsack Pittman of England in the final round, 6—3, 6—4.

Miss Vahey Wins, 3 and 2

Miss Rosamond Vahey of Vesper Country Club, Lowell, today successfully defended her Massachusetts women's golf title when she defeated Miss Deborah Verry of Tatnuck, Worcester, 3 and 2, in the 18-hole final at Brae Burn Country Club.

Cardinal Gives Rosary

The gift from Cardinal O'Connell to the bride, a pearl rosary, was the only one of the thousands of gifts which actually went to the ceremony.

Miss Curley carried the rosary in a white satin bag which dangled from her wrist as she walked down the aisle.

Double Ring

A question which had been in thousands of persons minds was not answered until the Curley wedding ceremony neared its close today.

"Will the wedding be a single ring or double ring ceremony?" was the question.

The matter was settled once and for all when the bridegroom slipped the wedding band on his bride's finger, and she in turn placed a ring on her bridegroom's finger.

It was a double ring wedding.

Cardinal's Blessings on Mary's Bridal

"There are many notables here, but there is One whom you cannot see.

"He is here, nevertheless, blessing this union.

"He is the only one present whom you will always remember."

Thus spoke Cardinal O'Connell at the conclusion of the wedding ceremony, which united Mary Curley and Lieutenant-Colonel Edward C. Donnelly.

Addressing the thronged Cathedral, His Eminence said:

"The Sacrament of Matrimony is too sacred to be vulgarized or plagiarized. This is purely a Christian ceremony.

"When most marriage ceremonies are over, the flowers fade, the gifts are put away and the friends depart.

"But I want you to remember that there is one whose presence at the ritual can never be forgotten, and that is His presence.

"There is a large gathering of notables here, but who they are may not always remain in your memories. But His presence will never be forgotten by you."

Turning to the couple, he added:

"My dear children, you have been brought up in Christian families. You are pledging your sacred promises to one another in Christ's Church.

"Christ is here, and he is blessing your happy Christian union.

In your marriage, you have the blessing of Christ and His Church."

The Cardinal stepped forward and congratulated the couple. He was followed by the Right Reverend M. J. Splaine, of the St. Mary's of the Assumption Church, who was chaplain during the ceremony.

How He Sees It

Making his appearance on the steps of the Curley mansion nearly an hour before any other member of the family, Francis Curley, 11, played with his every-day chums.

He was attired in formal morning clothes, cut to his size, with an Eton collar and black bow tie, and patent leather shoes.

CARDINAL HEARS NUPTIAL VOWS OF FIRST LADY

decorated with simplicity becoming the religious nature of the occasion. The only decorations were palms within the chancel rail and white lilies and roses on the altar.

TRIBUTE TO MOTHER

She wore a pearl neckince which her father had given her mother, and which, this morning, he gave to her.

Mary paid a tender tribute to her mother before the wedding. She sent most of the flowers, which were gifts to her, to her mother's grave in Calvary.

The flowers filled two automobiles. Governor Curley and his youngest son, Francis, 11, went to the cemetery and together they knelt in prayer at the mother's grave, beside which are the graves of Dorothea and James M. Curley, Jr.

Before leaving on their honeymoon this afternoon, Mary and her new husband prayed at the grave.

Behind the bride and her father in the procession to the altar came the flower girl, 10-year-old Joan Stewart of Chestnut Hill, a cousin of the bridegroom, escorted by Francis Curley, 11, in his long-trousered morning suit and Etonn collar.

HER FOUR BRIDESMAIDS

Next came the bridesmaids, each escorted by an usher. The bridesmaids were Miss Mayline and Miss Catherine Donnelly, sisters of the bridegroom, and Miss Anne Kliegl of New York and Miss Jeanne Smyth of Chicago.

Miss Bremner, a Chicago girl who was the fiancee of the late James M. Curley, Jr., followed, walking alone.

At the chancel rail, as the bride took the arm of Lieutenant-Colonel Donnelly, who came across from one side with his brother, she handed her bouquet to Miss Bremner.

Upon leaving the church, she again took it and later threw it to her bridesmaids and friends in accordance with tradition after her wedding breakfast.

Four prie-dieus were set within the chancel rail for the bride and bridegroom, the best man and maid of honor, to kneel upon during the high mass.

Father Kelley, the celebrant, was assisted by Rev. William B. Foley, as deacon, and Rev. James Hennessy, sub-deacon. The master of ceremonies was Rev. Harry M. O'Connor.

CARDINAL BLESSING

When the mass ended, the Cardinal walked forward and bestowed his blessing on Mr. and Mrs. Donnelly.

The Cardinal also spoke to the young couple and said in closing:

"Christ is here and He is blessing your happy Christian union. In your marriage, you have the blessing of Christ and His Church."

The double ring ceremony was used.

As the bride left the Cathedral and reappeared before the throng, she smiled. As she walked to the car leaning on the arm of her tall husband, she waved in response to cheers.

The First Corps Cadets, in powder blue uniforms, were also at the Cathedral.

Thousands saw the young couple speed through West Dedham street and Dartmouth street, many women shouting good wishes to them from windows and along the route.

It was a colorful procession and as it emerged from Dartmouth street into Copley square, a huge crowd, many of whom were packed on the library steps, shouted acclaim.

The car was driven to the state entrance of the Copley-Plaza Hotel, the door nearest Trinity place.

2000 GUESTS

After the guests arrived Mr. and Mrs. Donnelly received them in the Sheraton room.

The wedding breakfast at which the bride cut a huge cake, surmounted with a frosted design of the cathedral, was served in the main dining salon. There were 2000 guests.

The bride and bridegroom arranged to leave for New York by train at 5 p. m. and sail tonight on the Europa for a honeymoon abroad.

MANY KISS THE BRIDE

Mrs. Donnelly, senior, received the guests with her new daughter-in-law, her son and Governor Curley and the bride's attendants. Many of the men took advantage of the privilege of kissing the bride.

After an hour the new Mrs. Donnelly grew tired of shaking hands and was forced to rest, but her father and her husband remained to receive all the guests.

The wedding breakfast included fruit cup, olives, celery and nuts, lobster thermidor, olivette potatoes, fancy fruit ices, cake and coffee. No liquor was served.

LIONIZE FRANCIS

Little Francis, while awaiting breakfast, munched chocolats with his chum, Bob Lawler, to the delight of the 1000 persons who wound through the Sheraton room in the receiving line. Francis greeted the guests very informally. Many of the women kissed him.

After breakfast, Mary stepped out with her husband and danced. They waltzed to the strains of "I Adore You." A few minutes after they started, Governor Curley and the elder Mrs. Donnelly joined them. The two men exchanged partners.

The elder Mrs. Donnelly was stunningly attired and lent grace and charm to the occasion.

GETS BRIDE'S BOUQUET

Gov. Curley later danced with several others, including Miss Bremner, the bridesmaids and Mrs. Leo Cummings of Chicago, daughter of the late Roger Sullivan, a prominent Democratic leader.

When Mary threw her bouquet in the dining salon it was caught by Miss Mayline Donnelly, who, according to tradition, will be the next of her bridesmaids to be married.

It was announced that, as many of the guests were returning to their homes in the New York area, three private cars would be attached to the Yankee Clipper at the Back Bay station, on which the young married couple also go to New York.

A crowd of 2000 gathered about the house and were held back by 50 police. Four detectives, in full morning dress, were on the steps.

Despite the long wait, the crowd was in excellent humor. They first saw Mrs. Donnelly appear on the arm of the Governor, who escorted her to her car and she left immediately for the Cathedral.

Then the Governor escorted his daughter from the house and the crowd caught its first glimpse of her on the steps where she stood, smiling, for photographers. From the foot of the steps a canopy stretched to the sidewalk. When Miss Curley and her father reappeared after passing under the canopy, she waved to the crowd.

It was echoed by many more.

Other remarks heard were:

"Doesn't she look wonderful!"

"What a beautiful gown!"

HOLD BACK CROWDS

Her bridal bouquet also caused many exclamations.

All along the route to the Cathedral, which was by way of Jamaicaway, Riverway, Fenway, Ruggles street, Tremont street and West Dedham street, crowds at the corners shouted:

"The bride! Here comes the bride!"

Police were on duty at many of the corners, especially along Tremont street and in the final blocks the police lines were solid. Elbow to elbow they held back the immense throng which overflowed out of Washington street clear around the Cathedral.

Little Francis Curley was the center of much attention. He had been playing in the back yard with his chum, dressed in his Eton schoolboy suit—his first long trousers, incidentally. The crowd watched his frolicking until his father came out and ordered him inside, where his hands had to be scrubbed again.

Ushers in the Cathedral were George and Leo Curley, Frank M. Archer, Jr., Arthur Hugh Bancroft, of Cohasset; James Cox Brady, Jr., New York; James Brown, New York; William G. Caldwell, New York; Donald Connolly, Brookline; Edmund L. Dolan, West Roxbury; Martin J. English, Boston; Paul W. Fitzgerald, Marblehead; A. Marvin Laidlaw, Greenwich, Ct.; Clifford A. McAleenan, New York; Roland D. Mahoney, Chestnut Hill; J. Walter Quinn, Jamaica Plain; Burnett L. Robbins, Chicago; Lieutenant James G. Sliney, Brighton, and Major Joseph F. Timilty, Hyde Park.

People who had known Governor Curley when a boy. Men who when boys played on the streets with her father.

The older women in the crowd had played with her late mother when she was Mary Herlihy, also of Roxbury.

People who knew Governor Curley and Mrs. Curley when they were a struggling young couple just married.

Three thousand invitations had been sent out to invited guests for the ceremony. An hour before the time set for the wedding they began to arrive.

The two center aisles on both sides in the Cathedral had been set off for those arriving with guest's tickets.

To the sides of the center were seats available for guests without tickets. These seats were taken immediately after the first mass at the cathedral at 6:45 o'clock.

Who's First Lady?

Who will be first lady of the Commonwealth, now that the Governor's daughter has become Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly?

While no official ruling could be cited, it was the opinion of most State House authorities that the new Mrs. Donnelly would remain first lady and that her marriage would have no effect upon her status at State functions.

25 Kiss Bride

Between 20 and 25 close friends and relatives kissed the bride. She shook hands until she was nearly exhausted and then consented to rest. The governor, however, shook hands with everyone. It reminded him of Washington's Birthday in the Hall of Flags.

Sheriff Gallant Dies

Skowhegan, Me., June 8 (AP)—Prosper J. Gallant, 43, of Madison, serving his second term as sheriff of Somerset County, died today after an operation.

Here Comes the Bride! 'First Lady' Walks With Governor

To the strains of the Wedding March, Mary Curley walked down the aisle in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross today to the altar where she became the bride of Lieutenant Colonel Edward C. Donnelly. On the arm of her father, Governor Curley, the First Lady of the State made a pretty picture in her bridal gown with flowing train. The cathedral was filled and thousands more stood outside in the hope of getting a fleeting glimpse at the bridal party. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

ROOSEVELT HOME for Week-End Rest

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt arrived home today for a week-end visit before going to the Military Academy at West Point Wednesday to address the graduating class.

Mr. Roosevelt directed a drive straight home, where his mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, waited with breakfast table all filled.

Secret! ! Won't Tell Bridal Gifts

The wedding was over only an hour when the "boss" of the "House of Donnelly" was discovered by a Boston Evening American reporter. Here is how it happened:

"What presents did you exchange?" asked the reporter.

"That's up to him," quoted Mary. "I promised Edward I would not tell."

"What do you say, Mr. Donnelly?" pressed the reporter.

"The answer is: 'No.' I won't reveal that. That is one secret we are going to keep to ourselves."

Cycles Slowed

Despite the excitement of the occasion, the Governor kept in mind the unfortunate death of Motorcycle Officer Daniel McCallum, killed on Memorial Sunday while escorting the chief executive to his home from services at Fenway Park.

Immediately after the ceremony, Governor Curley issued strict orders to Lieutenant John T. O'Dea that the motorcycle escort was to drive slowly—at a speed of not more than 20 miles an hour.

Today was the first time a motorcycle escort had been used since Officer McCallum's death.

MACKEREL A Penny, No Takers

SHIP CAPSIZES 75 TOSSED IN SEA, 2 LOST

Of wooden construction, the 125-foot steamer literally broke its back on the ledge, witnesses said.

SENDS DISTRESS CALL

The captain of the North Haven said he sounded a warning and the Castine answered.

A few minutes afterward, a distress signal sounded from the Castine, and the North Haven hove to. Life boats were immediately launched.

Four coast guard boats were despatched to the scene, and aided in rescuing passengers who were struggling in the water.

The couple drowned was Charles Wooster of Rockport and Mrs. Wooster.

Wooster's body was recovered but that of Mrs. Wooster was not found.

Both remained aboard the craft, which was two-thirds submerged, until after all the passengers had been rescued. They were taken off by coast guardsmen.

VETERAN RESCUED

The North Haven's crew found the Castine's passengers, most of them husbands and wives, grasping portions of the boat that were above water.

A few still remained out of the water on the section that were not submerged.

Among those rescued was Fernando S. Hilbrick, 90-year-old Civil War veteran and former commander of the Maine Department, G. A. R.

Among those thrown into the water was Frank L. Morse, Superintendent of Schools at Thomaston, who said the vessel lurched when it first struck, tossing him into the sea.

A member of the crew locked his legs and by grabbing them, Morse was hauled on board again. He was unable to swim.

Mrs. Rebecca Alley, Mrs. Nathan Hopkins, Mrs. Grace Packard, all of Camden, and Miss Evelyn Bartlett of Washington, Me.

SHIPS CRASH Off Cape Breton

Sydney, N. S., June 8 (AP)—The British freighter Nubian, her forepart badly battered, crept into Sydney Harbor this afternoon after a collision in a fog off Cape Breton with the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverhill.

It had taken the 6384-ton craft more than 18 hours to negotiate the 100 miles between the point of the collision in Cabot trait and Sydney. Lines seriously damaged, the Canadian Pacific Railway ship continued on her course from England to Montreal.

SALESMAN DIES On Golf Links

Allan Percy Turner, 66, a salesman for Stone and Webster Company of 49 Federal street, died of a heart attack today while playing golf with his son Robert, at the Jefferson Golf Club, Norristown, Pa.

Turner, who had been visiting his son, had just finished playing the 16th hole when he complained of pains in his chest. He died before he could reach a hospital.

BUDDHA BOOK Lost in Blaze

Changte, North Honan Province, China, June 8 (AP)—A book of inestimable value called the "Buddhist Classic," which Buddhists here said was the only copy in existence, was lost today when fire destroyed a 600-year-old library.

Many other valuable volumes were burned.

EUROPA REVENGE Beats Normandie

New York, June 8 (AP)—The North German Lloyd liner Europa, once speed queen of the Atlantic, sails tonight in the wake of the French liner Normandie, present holder of the title, with this consolation:

She will be carrying approximately 400 more passengers than did her rival.

TYNNE NEIMI to Get $15,000

Salem, June 8—Through an agreement filed in superior court here today, H. Wesley Buswell, wealthy Gloucester resident, will pay Tynne Neimi, 32, a former maid, $15,000, in settlement of litigation in progress for two years.

ITALY IN NEW WAR WARNING TO BRITAIN

By International News Service

Rome, June 8—Guards were trebled at the British Legation today and special detectives assigned to prevent unpleasant incidents in connection with the growing anti-British feeling over the Italo-Abyssinian dispute. The Abyssinian Legation continued to be heavily guarded.

Cagliari, Sardinia, June 8—Premier Mussolini told soldiers departing for East Africa today "we have an old and a new account to settle" with Ethiopia "and we will settle them."

Apparently referring to Great Britain's openly expressed opposition to Italy's policy in Africa, Il Duce said the accounts would be settled without taking "any account of what is said beyond the frontier."

Speaking to 20,000 soldiers of the Sabaudia division and a large crowd of Blackshirts, the Fascist dictator made a sharp and pointed reference to England.

"We will imitate to the letter those who try to teach us a lesson," he said.

"They have demonstrated that when they were creating an empire by defending it they never took into consideration world opinion.

"If the Blackshirt regime calls the youth of Italy to arms it does so because it is its bounden duty, because it finds itself faced with a supreme necessity.

"All Italian people feel this fact and the whole people are ready to spring up as one man when there is a question of the power and glory of their country."

Il Duce began his speech immediately after the troops had passed in review, saying:

"Blackshirts of Cagliari, you have witnessed a superb manifestation of force and discipline wholly worthy of the heroic and warlike Sardinian race."

The soldiers, in full war equipment and drawn up along a two-mile front, cheered Mussolini lustily.

The city was plastered with great posters containing a proclamation by the mayor which said:

"Today's demonstration will show that Italy is united and will march with obedience and discipline to accomplish those ends which her king and her duce will announce."

DOUG TO FORM NEW FILM FIRM

By International News Service

Singapore, June 8—Creation of a new motion picture producing unit lies at the end of Douglas Fairbanks' projected 6-month dash to Hollywood, he said today.

The Fairbanks South Seas yachting cruise was interrupted yesterday when he received a cable from Hollywood.

It led him to attempt to re-enact, in real life, one of those swift-action dramas he portrays on the screen.

"I am a director of United Artists and I am going to Hollywood to help straighten out the muddle.

"I plan to arrange for one of the finest producers in Hollywood to organize a new producing unit."

Hays Dozes, Hits Tree

Representative Martin J. Hays narrowly missed being killed or seriously injured early today when he fell asleep at the wheel of his automobile and crashed into a tree.

Mrs. Charlotte Wood, of 81 Brighton avenue, Allston, awakened by a loud crash, hastened to the window to see the machine toppled over and a tree recently planted by ERA workers uprooted on her lawn.

She summoned police, but when they arrived, no victim was to be found. The car was overturned, but empty, abandoned.

Representative Hays found at his home by police said he was uninjured.

He told investigating officers he had been tired from overwork, and had dropped into a doze while on his way home.

FOSTER WILL Battle Looms

Newport, R. I., June 8—A new legal battle against the $1,000,000 Fanny Foster estate, was expected today with the filing of equity proceedings here to tie up $300,000 of the estate.

The claim was made by Dr. George S. Foster of Manchester, N. H., a second cousin.

Parents Await News of Missing Son

MRS. KAUL

JOHN KAUL

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kaul of New York City are impatiently awaiting word of their missing son, Jackie, 5, who vanished while at play on the Sutton Place playground Thursday. While police are searching cellars and homes for a trace of the boy, the father expressed the belief that the lad had been picked up by someone who mistook the child for the son of wealthy parents. Norma Jail Stay Looms; Plan Millens' Funeral

There will be no parole for Norma Brighton Millen.

The wife of Murton Millen, made a widow by the electrocution of the three machine-gun killers yesterday morning, must serve her jail term.

Sentenced to a year in Dedham jail for her part in the Needham bank holdup, she was eligible for parole this month.

But a parole requires two signatures, those of District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk County and Probation Officer Albert Rounseville.

And it is believed that Dewing will refuse to sign.

Norma does not know.

Certain that her parole is now but a matter of forms she has been making preparations for her release since the execution of her husband became assured.

FACES SUMMER IN JAIL

She told her father, the Rev. Norman Brighton, that she was going to spend the summer months in a small New Hampshire community.

She will spend the hot months in Dedham jail.

Norma will not be told today.

First she must make a formal petition for parole. Then it must be sent to Dewing and Rounseville.

District Attorney Dewing indicated that when he received the petition, expected to reach him on Tuesday, he would take it under immediate advisement.

Then, for two weeks, nothing will be heard from it.

In the meantime, unless some member of her family is permitted to tell her, Norma will continue to believe that release is just around the corner.

District Attorney Dewing who prosecuted the Millen brothers, Faber and Norma, and who has indicated his intention of prosecuting the brother and sister of the Millens for an attempted jail delivery, will not soften toward anyone connected with the case.

Norfolk County officials connected with the prison, have been deluged with telephone calls, telegrams and letters protesting violently against any attempt to parole Norma.

Norma does not know that either.

Envisaging a world ready to forget her if it cannot forgive, she told relatives that she will move with her family to another state to begin life anew.

PAROLE PROTESTED

She herself has long since shrugged off the entire affair, so far as it was possible to do so.

She paid little attention to the execution, and only at the last minute relented long enough to send a word to Murton.

She steadfastly refused to see him before he was transferred.

And she will not attend the funerals.

Sheriff Samuel H. Capen, of Norfolk county, said that she had not applied for permission to attend the ceremonies.

He said that she slept through the electrocution, and has not referred to it since. He admitted that he would let her go to the funeral if she asked, but doubted that she would ask.

The funerals of the Millen brothers will be held at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning from the residence, 39 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury.

Funeral services for Faber will be held at 12 o'clock tomorrow noon from 239 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury.

The Millens and Faber will be buried in separate cemeteries.

The Millens will be in Independent Order Brith Abraham Cemetery, West Roxbury. Faber will be in the Jewish cemetery, Grove street, Roxbury.

LAVAL IS MADE 'MONEY CZAR'

Paris, June 8—The Senate approved Premier Pierre Laval's decree powers to protect the franc by the overwhelming vote of 233 to 15 today, after the emergency measure had been grudgingly passed by the Chamber of Deputies.

Previously the Senate finance committee had approved the decree bill after disclosing a budget deficit of 6,500,000,000 francs (approximately $415,000,000) and the Treasury faces the difficult task of finding this huge sum.

The deficit, because of railroad obligations, was estimated in the chamber at 19,000,000,000 francs. The Senate committee concluded the emergency powers were urgently needed to avoid devaluation.

The powers, withheld from others, were granted within 24 hours after Laval took the helm of the government. The Premier, the third to face the chamber in eight days, wrung decree powers from the legislative body by a vote of confidence of 324 to 160.

Parliamentary investigation of the recent "organized panic" against the franc was proposed by the chamber finance committee and the prosecution of speculators was started with the first indictment.

BRUNO DEFENSE IN NEW PLEA

New York, June 8—Six more alleged errors in the court's charge to the jury were cited today by the defense of Bruno Richard Hauptmann seeking to invalidate the trial in which he was convicted for the Lindbergh crime.

The six were added to the 134 already cited before the court of errors and appeals, New Jersey's highest court, before which the appeal will be argued later this month.

The new errors claimed by the defense dealt with the portions of the trial court's charge dealing with the time and place of the Lindbergh baby's death, the charge that if the theft of the child caused his death the crime was murder, the court's citation of the New Jersey statute dealing with "entering with intent to steal and commit a battery," the charge that such a murder was in the first degree, and the charge that the state's chief handwriting expert had said his conclusion was "irresistible, unanswerable and overwhelming."

Schools Guarded

Leominster, June 8—Police were asked to watch all schools today by Acting Chief Henry O. St. Cyr. Fear of a firebug caused the order to be issued. Clinton High school was damaged by fire yesterday.

MYSTERY CALL SAYS MISSING BOY 'ALIVE'

By Associated Press

New York, June 8—The mother of five-year-old John Kaul, who has been missing since Thursday night, said today she had received a mysterious telephone call that her boy was safe.

The caller told her:

"Mrs. Kaul, your baby is safe. God bless you. Goodbye."

Mrs. Kaul said that the person called her at her home late last night, speaking in a low voice, like that of a "crystal gazer such as you hear over the radio and in the movies."

Police were unable to trace the call, and both authorities and the distraught mother were inclined to doubt its authenticity.

DROWNED, SHE FEARS

Although she has persisted in the belief that her boy is still alive, Mrs. Kaul said that she now feared he had drowned in the East River, near the Kaul home in the Sutton place. She explained:

"Everybody is trying to discourage me in that belief. But I am becoming more convinced of it. My husband feels that some stupid person, not meaning any harm, might have picked up the boy up. He feels certain that Jackie did not drown."

Police announced that they had turned from the drowning theory to the possibility of kidnaping. They questioned two workmen who said they had seen what appeared to be a boy fall into the East River Thursday night.

Police continued their search for an unidentified woman whom a taxi driver, Harry Lepow, said he had seen talking to a boy answering Jackie's description, two blocks from the Kaul home Thursday night.

BOY WAS CRYING

Lepow told police he noticed the woman leading the boy by the arm. The boy, who he said resembled the missing Jackie, was crying that he wanted to play ball. He said he heard the woman tell the child:

"When you get home and get washed you might play ball afterward."

At that point, the taxicab driver said, he picked up a fare and drove off.

MILL MEN RAP WALLACE AGAIN

By Associated Press

Washington, June 8—While a cabinet committee had before it specific recommendations for improvement in the textile industry from influential business men and industrialists, Secretary Wallace drew fresh fire from embattled mill men of the North.

He was accused by Lincoln Bayles, spokesman for the northern mills' policy committee, of "cool, callous disregard" for the textile industry and its employes.

In a statement from Boston, Bayles called on the textile bloc in Congress to wage a determined fight against the processing levy, adding the manufacturers were "straining every effort to hold fast to code conditions."

Recommendations to the special cabinet group by the committee for economic recovery — a voluntary organization of business and industrial leaders—included a proposal for 10 cent cotton loans.

Other recommendations included continuance of the present processing tax, continuance of government efforts to narrow the wage differential between northern and southern mills and the continuance of a permanent basis of the cabinet group now studying the textile problem.

Broker Dead as Boat Docks

En route from New York to visit his son in Dummer Academy, Byfield, Alexander E. Hunt, 53, a broker, died on the liner Boston. It was revealed when the ship docked here today.

Hunt, a graduate of Harvard in 1906, was discovered by a steward. Although physicians said death was due to natural causes, an autopsy will be performed.

Police said Hunt was connected with Chapin & Co., New York and Chicago brokers. He had a summer home in Martha's Vineyard.

His automobile, stowed in the hold of the vessel, was taken ashore and placed in the hands of police awaiting word from his home in Yonkers, N. Y.

SHIPS CRASH Off Breton Isle

Halifax, N. S., June 8 (AP)—The Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverhill and the British freighter Nubian collided last night in Cabot Strait, off Cape Breton Island, said word received here today.

Both vessels were slightly damaged and the Nubian is limping to North Sydney.

SENATE FIGHT THREATENS NEW NRA

Washington, June 8—A brisk controversy over enforcement of anti-trust laws under the new voluntary NRA bill today threatened the fate of the legislation in the Senate.

The House beat down moves to delay approval and passed the bill, 264 to 121, but a number of Senate leaders were dissatisfied with the new Blue Eagle.

Opposition forces feared the voluntary agreements permitted in the new bill to replace the old codes would be exempt from anti-trust laws.

Even Senator Harrison (D) of Mississippi, a staunch administration leader, conceded that in his opinion the anti-trust exemption technically remained in the new NRA law.

Critics were somewhat softened in their opposition to the recovery administration by the announcement that Chairman Donald Richberg had resigned effective June 16, and that the President had accepted the resignation.

Washington, June 8 (UE)—Organized labor presented a five-point legislative program as a first step in meeting the problem created by the Supreme Court decision invalidating the National Recovery Act, and then went on record for revision of the Constitution.

The legislative program, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared in a radio address, "represents the minimum legislative measures necessary to meet the problem of unemployment and the national emergency which originated in 1929 and still exists."

The five-point program calls for:

Enactment of a new act to replace the National Recovery Act.

Passage of the Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill.

Enactment of the Black-Connery 30-hour week bill.

'Swap' Wife Asks $250,000

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 7—Echoes of the quadrangle "wife-swapping" divorce case were heard in court here again today in legal preliminaries to hearing of a $250,000 alienation of affections action brought by Mrs. Leach C. Sewell against Mrs. Jane Emerson and her mother, Mrs. Blanche P. Scholtz.

Mrs. Scholtz entered a general denial to Mrs. Sewell's charges that she aided Mrs. Emerson in the alleged theft of the love of Darton Sewell, wealthy sportsman, from his wife.

Sewell has filed a divorce suit in Reno, Nevada, and Mrs. Sewell has pending here a separate maintenance action.

Mrs. Scholtz admitted that last November she engaged an apartment at the request of her daughter and Sewell, but insisted she had no knowledge then of any relationship between the two.

At the quadrangle hearing Judge Ben Lindsey, noted marital arbiter, denied the divorce petitions of both Walter Emerson and his wife. Mrs. Emerson accused her husband of intimacies with Mrs. Sewell, and Emerson made similar accusations involving his wife and Sewell.

Judge Lindsey absolved Mrs. Sewell.

WOMAN HANGED In Ship Stateroom

New York, June 8 (AP) — A woman who signed the passenger list of the Colonial steamer Concord as Geraldine Stone of Providence, R. I., was found dead in her stateroom when the vessel docked here today. Her body was hanging from an upper berth by a twisted sheet, an artery of her right arm cut.

The woman was about 35, five feet seven, and weighed 100 pounds. She had blue eyes and sandy hair. Her clothes were inexpensive, she was without baggage and had only one dollar in silver. Police found no notes or other means of identification.

Dies in Cycle Spill

Skowhegan, Me., June 8 (AP)—Clinton Dowe, 12, son of Mrs. Beatrice Cobb of Harmony, died enroute to a hospital after a motorcycle on which he and Kenneth Reed were riding overturned in Harmony. Reed was unhurt.

of wealth in the wider terms; to give them places to go in the summer time—recreation; to give them assurance that they are not going to starve in their old age; to give honest business a chance to go ahead and make a reasonable profit, and to give every one a chance to earn a living.

"Newsdom," written for newspaper men, says it has questioned all editors and publishers that amount to anything, and finds them "overwhelmingly" certain that radical movements are of no serious trend."

The discovery will comfort many, but it is well to be cautious. There is always a possibility of underestimating what looks like "radicalism of no importance."

A gentleman named Louis the Sixteenth of France was much interested, as it turned out, in radicalism. One day returning from Fontainebleau, after spending a day shooting and killing nothing, he wrote in his diary the single French word rien, meaning "nothing." He was convinced that nothing of importance had happened that day, since he had killed no birds.

But the day was July 14, on which the Bastile was torn down, that started the French Revolution, that cost the king his head.

"Never underestimate your enemy or your competitor," is a good motto, for kings and business men.

Mr. Max Baer, who boxes, expressed gratification when told by his lawyer that in New York State young ladies could no longer sue him for breach of promise unless he had actually proposed marriage in writing. This, it seems, he is careful never to do. According to reporters, he said to his lawyer, humorously:

"Then it is open season."

It is necessary to remind the handsome boxer, and others, that an open season, where ladies are concerned, is not necessarily a safe season. Some broken hearts go to some good "smart, blackmailing lawyer," and tell him:

"See how much money you can get."

Other broken hearts act otherwise. In Chicago, yesterday, Miss Ida Soli, only sixteen, threw a stone through the window of Caesar Scaglione, aged forty-five, married, father of three. When Mr. Scaglione came out, Ida shot him dead and told police:

"He violated my honor and I hated him."

No law against "heart balm" law suits can prevent that sort of thing.

Let anyone ask, "What was the most exciting moment in your life?" And Bud Jones, colored, of Georgia, will know what to answer; having made his peace with everybody, on this earth and beyond, he was, reluctantly, sitting down in the electric chair in Milledge Prison, everything ready to speed him on his way when the telephone rang. The voice of Governor Talmadge told Warden Lawrence to wait twenty days.

Breaking of levees in the Missouri river above Kansas City has flooded 400,000 acres of farm land, bad for the farms and the farmers. In places, the river spread to a width of five miles.

The late Colonel Boyce Thompson, who understood engineering and employed able engineers, often said that these dangerous, surplus waters could be safely diverted and made to irrigate Western deserts. That might be worth trying, now that we have learned how to spend money, and try experiments.

Constance Wadley Bader's Betrothal Announced

By BETTY ALDEN

PERHAPS A FEW of the friends of the Louis F. S. Baders will be surprised at the tea at Windover, the Bader home in Dover this afternoon, when Mr. and Mrs. Bader announce the engagement of their daughter, Constance Wadley Bader to Robert Gorham Fuller . . .

Most of their friends have seen the exquisite square cut diamond which Connie has been sporting lately and have known by the way Connie and Robert have been so constantly together at social parties that a formal announcement was imminent . . .

BEATRICE DE MENOCAL

Connie attended Fermata School in Maryland and was presented last October at a luncheon at Windover, sharing honors with Nancy Holdsworth . . .

Like Nancy, who has exhibited several paintings at the Junior League, Connie has a flair for wielding a paint brush and spent last summer depicting on canvas some of the beauties of Cape Ann, especially Gloucester, where she studied . . .

Mr. Fuller is the son of Mrs. Robert Gorham Fuller of Milton and Sherborn, and the late Mr. Fuller . . . He is a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club . . .

The wedding will take place in October, before Mr. and Mrs. Bader make their annual hegira to Palm Beach where they occupy their villa every winter . . .

Beatrice de Menocal Weds

". . . and with all my worldly goods I thee endow," recited William Simpson as he slipped a ring on Beatrice de Menocal's finger at a high noon ceremony in Emmanuel Church today . . . and the phrase carried with it much more meaning than is usually the case for with that ring Babs became a daughter-in-law of one of Chicago's wealthiest families who have a large share of this world's goods to endow . . .

Glossy satin fashioned on very tailored lines graced the tiny, slim figure of the bride as she marched down the aisle, the eyes of fashionable members of New York, Chicago and Boston society focused upon her . . . She wore a long tulle veil and carried a corsage of white orchids . . .

Esmee de Menocal, as maid of honor, wore a frock of pale peach net with a leghorn picture hat and an arm bouquet of pastel flowers . . . The bridesmaids were attired in similar gowns of aquamarine net . . . with flowers and hat to match . . .

In the group were Anne Dick, Harriet Moseley, Phyllis Forbes, Marian De F. Clark and Dorothy Forbes, all of Boston; and Rosalie de F. Crosby, Mrs. Clarence Moore and Mrs. Daniel A. Davis, of New York . . .

Second Bride From Boston

THE BRIDEGROOM, SON of Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson of Chicago, was attended by James Simpson, Jr., as best man and by the following ushers: Messrs. John McL. Simpson, Hugh McB. Johnston, both of Chicago; William P. Watts and Clayton Banks, Jr., of Philadelphia; Arthur O. Choate, Jr., Robert Grant, Jr., and Parmely Herrick, Jr., of New York, and Robert Stewart, of Boston . . .

Babs is the second Boston girl who has been joined in marriage with the Simpson family, for James, Jr., came here several years ago to claim Elle De T. Snelling as his fair bride . . .

Ada Trafford Becomes Bride

The wedding was solemnized in St. Michael's Church in Milton with the Rev. Henry H. Hadley, Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, and the Rev. Vincent L. Bennett, performing the ceremony and Bishop Lawrence pronouncing the benediction . . .

Mrs. Henry H. Hadley, Jr. (Annette Trafford), was the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Polly Richardson, Linda Collens, Peggy Bradley, Louisa Richardson and Margaret Adams . . .

Honeymoon in Europe

THE BRIDEGROOM'S BROTHER, John Mason, attended him as best man, and the ushers were, Messrs. Bernard W. Trafford, Jr., Forrester Clark, John P. Davis, Carl Petrasch, Ralph Crews, Philip Tiffany, Robert Leeson, J. Harleston Parker, Henry Richardson and Thomas Kiernan . . .

Following the ceremony the wedding reception was held in the garden of the Trafford's Milton estate . . . Ada and her new husband are leaving this week end for a European honeymoon after which they will live in Boston . . .

She is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club and studied at the Petite Ecole Florentine in Florence, Italy . . . Mr. Mason, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mason of Exeter street and Hingham, graduated from Harvard in 1930, and is a member of the Hasty Pudding, Owl, Signet, Stylus, the Harvard Club of Boston and the Brookline Country Club . . .

Devastating New Fragrance

Fresh, Stimulating Scent Recaptures Ecstasy of Great Moments

By the BEAUTY EDITOR

DO YOU TAKE REAL enjoyment in a good perfume? Or is it just something you spray on for swank and glamour when you go out dancing underneath the stars?

June is the month we always choose to battle with dust, moth balls and vacation plans, so we give serious attention to perfumes which have definite tang and appeal—scents which are sharp, full-bodied and strong.

Have you ever seen paper flowers that looked so real and beautiful that you bent over to smell them? You probably have—and you've doubtless seen others so obviously artificial that you marveled that anyone would want them.

Well, the same thing holds true of perfume.

It has been said that a delightful fragrance is like a glamorous, sophisticated woman—never quite the same. At all times, however, it must be fresh and pert and possess a decided personality.

There is an exciting new perfume that is wholly acceptable to us regardless of the season of year or the mood we happen to be in. While its name may imply it should be worn to the theater and gala occasions, we like to think of it at home on gay summer-time prints and light, cool woolens.

If you've been looking for a fragrance that is surprisingly adaptable for all occasions—a scent that seems to make the dress you put it on softer and more expensive—then you'll probably go slightly mad over this new perfume.

Our own opinion is that it is for those moments in your life when you want to feel devastatingly feminine and appealing. It has a fresh flowery-ness to it that somehow makes your disposition seem sweeter.

It is sponsored by one of the most famous perfumers of the day and is now obtainable in a medium-sized bottle. (It can also be acquired by the dram). You'll begin feeling cheery the moment you see the package—midnight black with a view of the Paris Opera.

To learn the name of this lasting perfume with a dressy personality, call Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question: Do you know of any exercise to correct weak ankles? I have been told that toe dancing helps to strengthen the weakened fibers. Is this true?

JEAN F., Boston.

Answer: Yes, toe dancing does restore tone to slack fibers. One way to correct weak ankles is to kick off spiked heeled shoes, and take to broad soles and lower heels. Here is a good exercise: Sit on a low chair, lift the toes high while the heel is on the ground, and bring the toes down with a strong flexing of ankle muscles. Another way is to send the foot in circles with an easy swing. You can also lift up and down on the toes, moving slowly. All these exercises will help.

Pageant to Aid Guild

A PAGEANT OF NATIONS will be held on June 15 at Aigremont, estate of Mrs. J. Edward Downes, on High street, Winchester, in aid of the Guild of the Infant Saviour.

Mary Queen of Scots in the person of Miss Rose Downes and Columbia represented by Mrs. M. H. Hintlian, promise much of beautiful pageantry.

The committee for this event will be Mrs. Virgil Ghirardini, Miss Mary Lyons, Mrs. M. H. Hintlian, Mrs. Joseph McGonagle.

General chairman will be Mrs. J. Edward Downes, assisted by Mrs. William V. McDermott, president of the guild.

Dance and reception: Mrs. M. L. Regan, chairman, assisted by Mesdames Norbert J. Reilly, Edward C. Donnelly, P. A. O'Connell, John A. Reardon, Jr., John J. Moran, Joseph Carney, D. J. Falvey, Miss Julia Prendergast, Mesdames James J. Phelan, Joseph Regan, Andrew Porter and Daniel J. Lynch.

Games: Miss Mary Lyons, chairman, assisted by Mesdames John Regan, Joseph Fallon, John Morrison, while the committee for fortune tellers will be Mrs. Daniel F. Lynch, chairman, assisted by Mrs. C. F. Bowen.

The candy committee will comprise Mrs. Frederick Crosby, Mrs. Edward Goode, Miss Margaret Waters and Mrs. Frazier O'Leary, while the tonic committee will be Mrs. Frank Scully, Mrs. George Smith and the cashier will be Mrs. George McCarthy. Mrs. Andrew J. Porter will take charge of the ponies.

The entrance committee will be Miss Mary Corcoran, Miss Mary King, Miss Anna Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Thomas Scanlan and Mrs. William S. Harrington.

Oil FOR THE Lamps of CHINA

By ALICE TISDALE HOBART

Stephen Bests Ting

CHAPTER 38

If the new manager had thought that everything would be simple for him after that night, he soon found he was mistaken. That intimate moment with Ho was not to be repeated after their return.

But Adviser Ho came every morning now to the hong. After the clerks were in their places in the back office, with due ceremony he would come in his sedan chair, taking his place of honor at Stephen's left hand. In perfunctory fashion, he advised on routine matters of business.

But Stephen understood that this was all Ho dared to do, involved as he was in the intricacies of Oriental life.

It was his own hard luck, he told himself, if he could not work out a strong organization from the clues already given him.

Stephen glanced up from the empty desk he was contemplating. So Ting had come, just as he had expected. It was he who had set the snares that had beguiled Agent Ting into coming.

Rules of Mask

This man would not work. Well, Stephen was going to make him.

Knowing now the rules of wearing the mask, he was going to change them a little like an artist who knows the laws of his art well enough to break them. He meant to make a thrust behind this man's mask.

"For years I have set at naught the interest of my miserable self, making a mere pittance, striving night and day, selling thousands of tins of the foreign oil, and now Prior Born accuses me of . . ."

The agent stuttered, grew almost apoplectic. Did not this fool know that there was not such another agent in all the south of the province? No such fine credit as his? Ting's attitudinizing turned suddenly into a burst of real anger.

"I resign." He leaned near Stephen, shouting the words almost in his face.

"I say you can not resign." Ting's left eye shot up to an even higher angle, but the fireworks of his speech died away in sputtering. The barbarian telling him, the leading merchant of the south, that he could not resign.

"No," thundered Stephen, bringing his fist down on the table. He was venturing far.

According to Chinese custom, by that hang on the table he had informed the agent that he was his master.

"Mr. Ting prattles about losing face. Face! What is the little outer mask stripped off, compared with the face Mr. Ting will lose if he resigns? A merchant of China who does not know how to sell. See, they will know, for I shall tell them." Stephen pushed a paper full of Chinese characters toward the agent.

Ting Gives Way

Ting brought his left eye down to survey the paper. How had the foreign one learned all this.

"Resign, and to the Thousand Li Wall I will tell that the honorable Ting could not get business."

Did this insignificant barbarian know of the Oil Guild? Ting regarded the white man with a degree of respect.

"Talk about resigning! It is I who should dismiss you," Stephen whispered across the desk. "But how could I think of doing so, when it would mean ruin to me and resign with safety."

There was something of servility in his tone. He would go out, and he would exert himself like a barbarian. This foreign one knew how to ruin him, so that he could not live in the province.

Never before had he felt respect for a barbarian, but he hated Stephen, too, for forcing him to energy, an exercise as terrifying to men of an old race as a child's activity to his elders.

The door closed upon him. Stephen dropped his grand manner. He had gone pretty far with cock-eyed Ting. He had thought for a moment his thrust had gone too deep, and that it would be necessary for Ting to resign.

A Fresh Problem

But he had had to take the risk in order to rouse the agent to energy; the head office was already demanding his dismissal and Stephen knew that if he were dismissed, Ho would regard it as a violation of the personal relationship. He could write the Company now that Ting would work.

That afternoon as he wrote the letter, a sweet sense of power possessed him.

There was a knock, the door swung open, and the engineer from the Company launch stood with a broken part of the engine in his hands.

"Tai-pan, it refuses to work."

Stephen in an instant had the parts in his hands, studying them. His knowledge of machinery told him what was wrong. There was nothing to do. This part would have to be discarded. There'd have to be a new one.

He turned to give his order—a copy could be made at the ironmonger's in the city. Then his remembered. He could not make this small expenditure without the consent of the main office.

"Go now, manager of the machinery. I will attend to this," said Stephen.

When the door closed he sat drumming on the desk with his fingers, hating to write the main office for permission to spend this small sum of money.

A moment before he had felt the fine enthusiasm of the administrator. Now his house of cards had collapsed. He was only a clerk!

Again there was a knock. Fenton, of all people, that annoying boy who seemed to spend his time planning how he could get out of work.

"Would you mind," began Fenton, hesitating, for he saw that Stephen was in a black mood. "That trip I was to start on this afternoon—if I waited until Sunday? Today there's a pert picnic, and I'd like to be here Sunday, too."

Fenton looked angrily at Stephen's unresponsive back. Then, not daring to ask again, he went out.

"I might have given him his Sunday," Stephen thought with a secret sense of shame. "But he's always loafing on the job."

Somehow with that command he had been released from his own humiliation. He had power over men. Fenton had to obey him.

He did not know that some bit of common humanity went from him when he gave Fenton his orders. He only knew that he was beginning to make a good manager.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Be Honest, Above All, In Loveless Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHEN Gloria C. writes to ask me if, before her more or less loveless marriage, some three months hence, she can't justifiably go in for a secret love affair that will be wound up sharply before she attaches the orange blossoms to her voluminous bridal veil, she has really, I think, answered her question in her own mind.

Gloria is 21 years old. She knows—she must know—that fire can't be played with, that dynamite isn't a toy.

If she doesn't love her 35-year-old fiance, and does love a nameless, desirable and inflammatory youth, she will have to choose between them.

It isn't possible to say: "I will love desperately for so many weeks. After that I have other engagements." The human heart can't be regulated that easily. If it could, life would have fewer tragedies—and perhaps fewer supreme joys.

I'm sure you will think it's all right for me to marry Edward," Gloria writes me. "I'm not very good at jobs. I can't seem to keep one. My family is in a fearful mess of debt and anxiety. Edward not only loves me very much, but has money enough to look after all of us. I like him, but there's no thrill in it.

GENEROUS FIANCE

"But now I've met a boy I'm simply insane over. He couldn't marry me—doesn't even want to. If we love each other for a while, and nobody ever knew, and if I married Edward just the same and were a good wife to him—would there really be any harm in it?

"I suppose I could explain this engagement with Edward has to be gone through with. He has taking a house for me; he's seeing my mother through an operation. What I mean is: I'm 'bought and paid for.' I'm simply got to deliver the goods.

"But, dear Miss Fairfax, do let me have this short bit of secret happiness first—something I can live on forever after!"

I am deeply sorry for you, Gloria. And since she is so clear-sighted about it all, and fundamentally, I think, so honorable, I have no criticism to make of her projected marriage. She will doubtless fall in love with Edward afterwards and, as usual, they will be happy forever after.

SHE'S BEWITCHED

But to this boy who has bewitched her, she should resolve to say a very speedy and definite farewell. Unless she breaks with Edward, which, she points out, is impossible, the only square and, indeed, the only safe thing to do is to keep either man out of the picture altogether.

Edward is entitled to marry the girl he believes Gloria to be—a girl who hasn't messed herself up with a surreptitious love affair. A relationship of the type that Gloria suggests is folly at any time. Under the circumstances, it is unthinkable. If Gloria is, as she says, "bought and paid for," I fear I must insist that she hold to her part of the bargain. Otherwise her life will be a mixture of madness, deceit and remorse, and her marriage will have no chance of permanence.

TALKS TO EVERYONE BUT HIS WIFE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Have you ever known the type of man who is "the life of the party" and is a wall of silence at home? I feel as if I would like to scream my head off during our silent meals, our silent evenings at home, when he reads the paper for hours and then silently tramps off to bed.

When I beg him to talk, he looks at me with a withering smile, as if I were something out of the feeble-minded home, and says: "What would you like to talk about?" Have you any suggestions for dealing with a situation of this kind?

UNHAPPY

Some months ago a letter, not unlike yours, came to this column from a woman who cured silence with silence. She invited in relays of friends and relatives who, night after night, sat around, gazing at her silent partner, being, if possible, more silent than he was. The cure worked. But the machinery of this cure is too cumbersome for every woman to try.

Why not try and get a little diversion among your friends? Join a bridge club; have them meet at your house on a certain evening in the week, and play. Whether Mr. No-Can-Talk is there or not. Go to the local library and see what is open to you in the way of a reading club. Try to make some social connections through your church or your political party, and there is always the Y. W. with innumerable activities.

Don't sit home any longer and feel, as if you'd like to scream. That's very bad medicine.

There's No Such Place

By Nell Brinkley

There's no such place as a Shop for Broken Loves. Hearts mend by themselves—but that means new Loves, not the same ones made over!

Little Lucy, the SMALL one only seven years old, can take her blue-eyed, flaxon-haired doll, when the cracks come, the eyes won't shut, the pink bisque fingers are gone, to a "Doll Hospital," and get her back again exactly as good as new. And not only as good as new, but looking exactly the same. To little Lucy's eyes lovely "Galatha Irene" is the same shimmering doll that she was before she was broken.

But BIG Lucy can't do that with her broken Love. There is no shop where she can go to have him made whole again, his wings glosued, his curls replaced—as live gold as ever—his power of lyric poetry restored. No place at all; and no magician therein to do it. Lucy has to put him away in the place where you put things that are past, and never look at him again.

I know, MISS LUCY, that there are articles written, and sympathetic advice given that tell you differently. But wise ones know better. Both wise men and nice women. OH . . . you can have your Love back MENDED, just MENDED, and go on from there if you like, with all the cracks showing faintly, a hollow sound inside where something is out of place, and the curls not matching. But never made over and WHOLE again.

You may look for that little shop with the magician inside until your little pony-feet are dead, and you will not find it. There's no such place.

Color Pairs MOST IMPORTANT In Daytime

By ANNICE BRINK
Fashion Editor

Good things come in pairs, so they say, and it was never truer than this summer, when monotone ensembles are things of the past, and colors pair daringly and smartly.

And this holds true even though white is considered the first color for the season—but never, in any case, is it unrelieved by any other shade. Its "relief" may be anything, from a soft, rain - washed pastel, to a burning orange, to navy, purple, or brown. Occasionally, black.

With graduation days ahead, with important weddings coming nearer seemingly with the speed of a runaway train in an old movie thriller, and race days with all their attendant festivities directly ahead—the daytime ensemble is receiving more attention than the evening get-up, and here it is that color plays its most important part.

* * *

The semi-sports frock, suit or skirt-and-blouse being the all-pervasive thing, it is our first consideration. With it you may wear a cartwheel (remembering to keep it strictly tailored as to trimming, with no coy flowers, though a daisy is permissible), carry a large and even riotous-colored bag, wear oversized jewelry of the transparent composition type and indulge in the shoe that suits you best, low or high-heeled, two-tone or montone, strapped or tied, oxford or pump, just as long as it is not a fragile shoe.

* * *

The almost equally popular group, which includes eyelet batistes, swiss, cotton laces, nets and other kindred filmy and floaty fabrics that fit into the daytime scheme, also appropriates the large shade hat, though in a giddy version, naturally.

Here is your opportunity to indulge in some of the dainty things that are offered even to strict budgeteers—pastel doeskin shoes with bags to match, short, one-button mesh gloves, flower jewelry, and, yes, even the cultured pearl, which can give one a satisfying glow because it is real.

And then you may go pretty with rare effect. Dubonnet with aqua is one of the newest combinations. All the lilac shades with pink, yellow, green or white are familiar by now, if you've done as the interior window shopping you should have, with so many exciting color ideas being offered before your eyes. Try lemon-lime with apricot for another new effect.

THREE DELICIOUS MEALS OUT OF ONE ROAST

This Is Clever Economy

By MARTHA LEE

ALTHOUGH a roast or a large cut of meat may be hard on the budget, two or more meals planned from it will cut down the cost considerably.

Have this in mind when doing the buying—not only because of this fact, but because planned meals are more interesting and more successful than those that are arranged haphazardly.

Plan the meals for a week, at one time. Do this toward the end of the week, for often times there are greater bargains in the shops over the week-end. The foods can be bought and stored for later use. If guests appear at the last moment, touches may be added to make a company meal, even from these left-overs.

Here are some menus, the main dish of which is used to plan the luncheon for the next day. With the addition of another vegetable or so it could easily make a dinner menu to be used a day or two later.

Bridge

Contributions

By MRS. CULBERTSON

It is always nice to receive from my friends interesting hands as played.

These contributions clearly show the rapid development and increased proficiency of the play of the hand.

It is gratifying, indeed, to find bridge everywhere is being raised to ever higher standards.

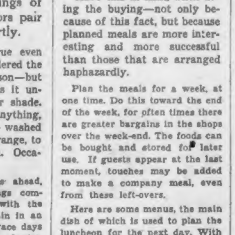
South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
North-South score: 40.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	2 ♢ (1)	2 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) This overcall is justified only because of North-South's part-score.

The South player, Wilfred Bland of Minneapolis, is to be congratulated on having perceived the brilliant play necessary to make contract against the unexpected bad breaks.

West opened the King of diamonds and was allowed to hold the trick. West shifted to the six of spades, bringing out the five, eight and Jack.

South saw that to get anywhere at all he would have to make up the club suit before his red Aces were knocked out, so he started right off with the King of clubs.

West won with the Ace and led his remaining spade, bringing out the nine, ten and Ace.

Declarer now suspected the unequal trump split and saw that if the clubs also were badly split, he might get into a jam.

As a measure of safety, he decided to take the next club lead through East up to his Queen instead of leading th Queen outright.

He therefore led a third trump to the King, and West's discard of the heart three proclaimed the bad news of the trump split.

Dummy led a club and it became evident that declarer's caution was well founded.

If East discarded, South would make the club Queen and the rest would be comparatively easy. East found the best defense by trumping the second club lead.

It was at this point that Mr. Bland perceived the necessity for an extraordinary and brilliant play.

He played the Queen of clubs! It was vital to unblock the suit even at the cost of this sacrifice. Otherwise the South hand would subsequently be forced to give up three losers in its red suits.

As East held the King of hearts, a small heart lead would be of no avail.

If he should try leading the King of hearts to knock out dummy's Ace at all costs, West could be thrown in after two rounds of hearts and compelled to lead into the diamond tenace. East again found the best defense by leading a diamond.

But South was now "in the clear." He stopped right up with the diamond Ace and led the club six.

West could cash the club Jack and diamond Queen, bringing the East-West total up to five tricks, but there was no sixth trick in sight anywhere for the defense.

HUGH SPEAKS IN LEE'S BENEFIT

CHAPTER 365

AT HUGH GRANTLAND'S whisper that he had "needed me so," I with difficulty controlled an impulse to rise from the the chair my sister-in-law had placed for me close to his bedside, and flee from the room.

Lilian's warning had torn a veil from something that I had been cherishing without my own knowledge, a romantic sympathy with Hugh which I was now feverishly afraid had been visible to other eyes less keen and less kindly than Lillian's.

The reaction had driven me to a point where I wished to be anywhere rather than in Hugh's presence. Yet I could not have disregarded this summons from a wounded man, and I knew that, now I was here, I must find out what he wanted of me and promptly execute any commissions he might lay upon me.

So, with fists clenched into my palms, I managed to get out a quavering, "Yes, Hugh. What is it you wish me to do?"

His eyes had closed with the effort of speaking to me, but they opened at my answer, and he smiled up at me.

CONCERNING LEE CHOW

"How — wonderful — you are," he breathed. "Always ready—"

"You musn't waste these minutes Dr. Braithwaite gave you in talking anything trivial," I admonished him, somehow forcing a smile with the words. "Please let me know just what it is you want, go that I may go about it."

"It—concerns—Lee Chow," he said, his voice suddenly formal even in its halting syllables.

I caught back an exclamation, for even though Lillian had vaguely warned me that Hugh would speak of his high-born Chinese friend. I could not bring myself to any willingness to come in contact with the Oriental.

"I know," Hugh said faintly, and evidently speaking with difficulty, "that you believe Lee Chow instigated that attack upon —your husband—and that, therefore, you shrink from seeing him. But I am asking you to reserve judgment upon him, until after you have talked with him."

"You—wish to see him?" I asked dazedly, and with a sense of actual terror at the thought of an interview with the man who had so startled me by his patient belief that I should belong to Hugh instead of to my husband.

"No, if the thought of it fright-ens you to that extent," he said tenderly, but there was something underlying the chivalric tenderness which brought the hot blood to my cheeks. Was it possible that he subconsciously—I knew that he never would consciously criticize me—was accusing me of cowardice?

The thought was like the flick of whip lash. I threw up my head and faced him steadily.

HUGH'S WARNING

"I am not frightened to any extent," I told him. "If you will tell me what you wish me to say to Lee Chow, I will go to him at once."

"There is nothing I wish you to say to him—now," he said. "I simply wish you to listen to what he has to tell you. He tried to tell it to me before his seizure, but could not. And now Dr. Braithwaite will not permit me to go to him, and Lee Chow cannot be moved from the room in which he is lying—not until his heart action shows improvement. It is imperative that I know what he wishes to tell me, but—he will tell it to no one except you or me, therefore—"

He paused and looked up at me hesitatingly. I seized my courage with both hands, dragged it to the light and held it fast.

"Therefore I must see him at once," I said rising. "Is anyone with him?"

"Your father," he answered. "But—I must warn you—Lee Chow has told him that he must see you alone."

Free— But an Unwanted Woman

By RUBY AYRES

TODAY I am going to publish a letter which I received recently from a woman correspondent, which she has given me permission to reproduce.

She writes:

"There is so much talk about divorce and freedom and legal separation, that I thought it might interest some of your readers to hear of my experience.

"I have been married three years, during which my husband and I did not get along at all well together; in fact we were most unhappy.

"I do not know which of us was really to blame, but I think now that I might have been more tolerant, because I agree with something you once said in your articles, that if a difficult marriage turns out successfully, the woman in nine cases out of ten is the one to be thanked.

"Another man came into my life, and being young and unhappy, I accepted his friendship and kindness, and believed that I loved him as much as he said he loved me.

"A year ago my husband divorced me, and I believed at the time that it meant the beginning of a new life for me which would provide all the romance and happiness for which I longed.

"But from the very first I only faced disillusionment, for the man for whose sake I was divorced did not wish to make me his wife. He laughed when he saw my shock and amazement, and told me that as I had found it impossible to make a 'go' of my life with a perfectly decent husband, I was unlikely to be more successful with him.

"My disillusionment was complete, and since then I have been living alone—that pathetic thing, an unwanted woman. Even my friends, although they are not actually unkind to me, leave me out of their invitations, chi'ly. I know, because I am an unattached odd-woman-out."

I won't make any further comment on this unhappy letter, which surely speaks eloquently for itself.

Filet Crochet

FILET CROCHET PATTERN 924

IF YOU can use another pillow, let this lovely filet crochet basket be your choice.

And if you've plenty of pillows, make a chair or davenport set—it makes a very handsome one.

The basket is done in solid filet crochet with the design accented by popcorns—a most effective detail. The entire design is thrown into relief by the lace stitch that forms the background. Used on an end table or as a mat or scarf, this design would add to the richness of your furniture.

Pattern 924 comes to you with detailed directions and charts for making the filet crochet shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches needed; material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coins (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Paint "Don'ts"

DON'T paint a wet surface. You can't do a good painting job unless the wood is dry straight through. Failure to observe this rule is the most common mistake of amateurs, and the cause of most of their paint difficulties.

DON'T paint furniture on the porch, or near an open window. Little specks of dust settling on the still wet finish will mar it permanently.

DON'T paint over a glossy surface. If the old surface is glossy, wash it off with a commercial paint cleaner, or with soda water to remove the gloss.

SHEER CAPE FROCK

Concealing Though Sleeveless

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9342

It won't take you any longer to sit down and make up this sheer, cool frock than it would to shop for one!

And this time you can get exactly the fabric you want in your most becoming color and all at so little expense to you.

Almost a "labor-saving device" is that clever cape-yoke cut all in one and eliminating the warmth and trouble of sleeves!

Just the covery, but breezy way to treat a too-heavy arm; and the cape line over the slim panelled skirt has a pleasant way of equalizing one's proportions.

The fullness in the V is vogue now is nicely handled in front and back gathers and the bow is just the thing the frock needed.

Pattern 9342 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 3½ yards 39-inch fabric.

ARTICLE TEN
By ANDREW SMITH

I was dazed at the luxury I saw in the apartment of the G. P. U. official. Where was I? Was this Moscow, the capital of the Workers' Republic? Was this the home of an official of a Workers' Government?

Or was it all a terrible mistake? I could almost see the face of history laughing at me, the Pennsylvania miner, the veteran Communist, who had battled for years only to bring such a monstrosity into the world.

When we left the house, I remarked to my friend: "And this is what the Russian workers have to slave for! And yet they call it a workers' country!"

HAD THREE CHILDREN

She had three children and was earning 60 rubles a month.

"All I have to eat is black bread once a day," she complained. "I haven't enough money left to buy food for my children. I can't afford to buy any clothes. And yet I work in two factories, in two successive shifts, the first shift here, the second in another place. What a life!"

"But where are your children?" I asked.

"With my mother."

"Why don't you put them in a nursery?"

"I can't afford to pay the 30 rubles a month for them. Besides, the children in the nurseries go hungry just the same."

"How is it possible?" I argued. "When I was here in 1925, I saw beautiful nurseries."

"There are such," the woman replied, "but they are not for workers' children. They are for the bosses' children."

The woman lingered. Suddenly she surprised me with the question:

"Have you got a wife?"

"Yes," I answered.

"Oh, what a pity! You foreigners get more to eat than we. What wouldn't I give to get something for my little children!"

Again I was dazed. Was this the workers' republic in which a woman, slaving daily at two shifts, was compelled to sell herself to keep her children alive?

Later I discovered this was a common practice. One day, two young working-girls came to me and asked:

"Where do you come from? From Germany?"

"No, from America."

"Do you think that there is no hunger here?"

"Here at least everybody has a chance to work," I argued like a good Communist.

"Sure, but we are hungry just the same."

I asked the girls where they worked. They pointed to lathes in different sections, and told me that they had been at their posts for three years.

PARENTS DIE OF HUNGER

One of them was in the third category and earned 85 rubles a month; the other in the fourth and made 100 rubles. I asked them if they had any parents.

"No," they replied. "They died from hunger in the village. There was a great famine in 1931 in our section, in the Alexandrovsk district. Lots of people died then. We came on to Moscow."

The girls told me that they lived in the Checkovo barracks, sharing common quarters with men. Then they asked me:

"Do you have a room of your own?"

"Yes."

"That's good! We will come to you there. Where do you live?"

"On Mairoskaya street."

"Ah, at No. 15, the foreigners' house! We've been there, we went to the German Communist, Vitenberg. When shall we come to see you?"

"But I have a wife."

"Are there any single men there?"

"Yes."

The Communist propaganda has been telling the world that vice is extinct in the Soviet Union. But nowhere is vice so rampant as it is in Stalin's Russia.

As a Communist, I had all my life blamed the economic causes of capitalism for vice. It was a shocking revelation to me to find that the Soviet system introduced an economic pressure which compelled hard-working girls to solicit everywhere, at every hour, at every opportunity.

After three years spent as a worker in Russia, I came to know that a large number of Soviet working women, young and old, are forced to sell themselves for a little money, for a good meal, for a pair of stockings. And not only the women are caught in the spiderweb of vice.

The workers' children, boys and girls from the age of seven upward, are compelled to live together like so many sheep in congested barracks.

It is not considered wrong for an adult to have an affair with a 12-year-old girl.

The Soviet show-places for foreigners, in which the boasted Soviet system is proudly exhibited, are reserved for the wives and children of commissars, or functionaries, of the Communist aristocracy.

The millions of workers, their wives, their children are kept in a state in describable degradation, in comparison with which our worst slums are palatial quarters.

'Another article by Andrew Smith on true conditions in Russia will follow in an early issue.

N. E. Thrills Surprise Gibbons

The quiet, retired New England life you read about apparently just doesn't exist. Floyd Gibbons, famous thrill hunter, said here today.

Arriving en route to give an address at a school graduation in Dudley, the adventure writer declared his daily thrill story running in the Boston American displeased that situation. He said:

"The exciting tales I receive from New England readers surprise me more and more every day. You should see the huge pile of mail my Adventure Club gets from this part of the country."

BALDWIN FLAYS DICTATOR RULE

By International News Service

Aberdeen, June 8—Attacking the methods of dictators, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today pledged the new government formed under him yesterday to a policy of conservatism.

Baldwin declared his government was against "rash experiments in agricultural and industrial policy." His remarks were addressed to a great government rally in Himley Hall.

"More than any other country in the world," said Baldwin, amid cheers, "we are the guardians and trustees of democracy, freedom and ordered liberty.

"Dictators cannot gauge currents of public opinion because public opinion and dictatorship are self-contradictory."

Touching upon Britain's economic problems, the new premier said:

"We have not yet in sight any form of monetary stability or any agreement that will enable us to make readjustments necessary for a restoration of international trade."

Referring to the international situation, and the relationship of Italy, Russia and Germany, Baldwin said:

"You see that democratic country, the United States of America, struggling and making every kind of experiment with difficulties all around her.

"She is gallant in spirit, but is not yet in sight of completing an adjustment of her economics to conditions of a new world."

U. S. TRANSPORT LAW UNLIKELY

By Associated Press

Washington, June 8—President Roosevelt's six point transportation program appeared likely today to face some delay despite his insistence that "it is high time to deal with the nation's transportation as a single, unified problem."

Senators on the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee saw little likelihood of complete Congressional action before adjournment on more than two of the six phases.

The two measures described as likely to be passed are those enabling the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate buses and trucks, and extending the office of Transportation Coordinator Eastman for at least another year.

CUBAN KIDNAP VICTIM FREED

Havana, June 8—Antonio San Miguel, 78-year-old millionaire railroad magnate, was released today after three days in the hands of kidnapers but refused to say whether the $256,000 demanded ransom was paid.

Dirty and unshaven, the financier was freed only three blocks from his home.

He said he believed he was held on a farm about 20 miles from Havana and that his captors treated him roughly.

Girl Born to Screen Pair

$250 Kidnap Reward!

—Watch for These Bills—

The sum will be paid in cash for the arrest and conviction of the first of the Weyerhaeuser kidnapers, providing he is trapped through the marked ransom money and the bill is first brought to the City Editor of the Boston Evening American, 3 Winthrop square. In any event, twice the face value of the first note will be paid, and the bill itself returned to the finder after the Department of Justice has completed its investigation. Here are the numbers of some of the $20 Federal Reserve notes turned over to the abductors:

Blonde and 3 Flee Net G-Men Spread in Ransom Trail

By International News Service

Tacoma, Wash., June 8—Hunt for the three men and the attractive blonde suspects in the kidnaping of little George Weyerhaeuser, today was definitely centered in the Rocky Mountain region.

Following the appearance of 20 ransom bills in Salt Lake City last night, E. J. Connelly, G-man in charge of the Weyerhaeuser case, left here hurriedly by airplane.

He was scheduled to arrive in Salt Lake City today.

More than 500 peace officers, including a score of G-men, have blocked every road leading out of Salt Lake City.

The four suspects, last seen at Brigham City, Utah, at 7 a. m. Thursday, were believed to have back-tracked into Salt Lake City after getting as far east as Green River, Wyo., in a desperate flight to friends, gangland hideouts in Chicago or St. Paul.

One ransom bill was reported "turned loose" in Green River, Wyo., before the twenty bills appeared in Salt Lake City.

Whether the blonde was still blonde remained a problem. Although she was a blonde when last seen here she was reported to have entered a beauty shop and asked that her hair be dyed brunette. The hair dresser said she was not prepared for a "rush job" and the woman left for another beauty shop.

Highways in Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico were blocked by law enforcement officers.

TAXI MAN KILLS 2 IN HOLDUP

By International News Service

San Antonio, June 8—Two unidentified taxi-bandits paid with their lives today for robbing and beating Willie Sanchez, a taxi driver. The two were found in the taxi near Pleasanton, dead of knife cuts.

Before the car and bodies were found Sanchez notified officers the men had robbed him of a small sum and beaten him unconscious with a hammer. He was tossed into the back seat.

Sanchez recovered consciousness, found a pocket knife his attackers had overlooked and began slashing at them. As they stopped the car he jumped out and ran. The car was driven off by the two men.

Tom Manning, Sheriff Macedo of Atascosa county telephoned that the taxi with two dead men had been found.

Sanchez was held.

CHINESE ARMIES MARCH; JAPAN ORDERS WAR

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Shanghai, June 9 (Sunday) — China's 32nd army, considered among China's best troops, today began moving toward Tientsin, where Sino-Japanese relations apparently are approaching a crisis.

The 32nd army, headed by General Shang Chen, newly-appointed garrison commander for the Tientsin area, will replace the 51st army of General Yu Hsueh-Chung, which evacuated Tientsin and moved to Paotingfu, the seat of government for Hopeh province, 90 miles south of Peiping.

Japan Orders Invasion of China for Tuesday

By Associated Press

Tokio, June 8—Japan's war machine in Manchoukuo was reported in dispatches to have been ordered today to prepare for an invasion of China unless the Chinese government submitted to Tokio's ultimatum.

Tuesday was reported to be the day by which China must act.

A Rengo dispatch from Heinking, Manchoukuo, said orders to place Japan's war machine in Manchuria in readiness to roll southward across the Great Wall if China failed to submit to the ultimatum, were issued today from general headquarters of Gen. Jiro Minami, Japanese military chief in Manchoukuo.

The dispatch said a midnight council meeting of Minami's staff was held and that afterward Lieut. Gen. Juzo Nishio, after consulting with War Minister Hayashi, now in Heinking, issued "important orders."

The military authorities agreed these orders concerned preparations to "assume the initiative in the 'unfortunate event that the Chinese fail to display sincerity and good faith," as the Japanese phrase goes.

Major General Rensuke Isogai, Japanese military attache at Tientsin, said one of the Japanese army demands is that China recognize the new empire of Manchoukuo, wrested from China.

He declared:

"We seek a solution of all Chinese-Japanese problems, including that of the 'puppet regime.' By that later phrase I mean China's recognition of the new empire."

A Rengo dispatch from Peiping said the note insists on the removal of all Chinese military organizations from Hopei province.

U. S. Warships Ready for Crisis in China

By International News Service.

Peiping, June 8—The United States destroyer Stewart will arrive at Chinwangtao tomorrow, and the balance of the American Asiatic fleet's destroyer division will be quickly available in event of an emergency in the North China crisis, it was announced today.

Quins Twice in 20 Months Back in 1826

By Associated Press

Mercer, Pa., June 8—Records of a pioneer physician, Dr. James Magoffin, Jr., discloses today the birth of two sets of quintuplets and a set of twins within 20 months to a pioneer mother of Mercer County.

The records also indicate that the mother, Mrs. John Kelly, had given birth to triplets in New York before she moved here.

Dr. Magoffin's grandchildren, Dr. Montrose Magoffin and Miss Henrietta Magoffin, said the records show the births occurred in 1826. They said the records give the births of the quintuplets as occurring less than 12 months apart with the twins arriving eight months later.

All the quintuplets, which the records said were premature, died each after birth.

'JUNGLE GOLD'

By Rex Beach

Ever since Mamatoca's desertion he had eagerly anticipated the completion of his "stretch" and he had appeased the jungle man inside him with promises of ultimate freedom, the liberty to track her down.

Now, however, an apathy paralyzed him, his appetite was gone.

He made awkward attempts to reinstate himself—his white self—in Hannah's regard, but they were the efforts of a sick man and he could not find the energy to carry them through.

She was proud of his accomplishment, of course, and his helplessness aroused the mother instinct in her.

Likewise she saw in his present condition the chance to salvage for herself what was left of the man. So she took him north, away from the jungle. It was his first vacation.

That Autumn they sailed from New York on one of the great European liners, but alas, this was nothing like the honeymoon journey Steve had visualized that night when he sat by his son's sick bed, for he spent most of his time in a deck chair with Faith at his side.

He and Hannah had put in the Summer with their boy and both were delighted at the progress he was making.

Stevie was a brilliant student; with his mother's mind and his father's body and spirit there was no telling how far he would go.

Thank Heaven he liked the tropics! He'd be a builder!

He was his mother all over again; clean, high-principled, steadfast and dependable. Pentecost was extravagantly proud of him.

Proud of Faith

He was proud of Faith, too, but in a different way. Recognizing many of his own characteristics in her he was profoundly thrilled thereby and it fascinated him to watch the child develop.

A year of idleness restored the Pentecost health but nearly wrecked the Pentecost nervous system for, while Hannah indulged in a prolonged emotional spree, sight-seeing bored him intolerably.

In place of visiting castles and cathedrals, he inspected docks and terminals and market places, he studied European industrial practices and devised means for increasing the foreign consumption of bananas.

There came a time when he could no longer resist the impulse when he smelled the hot breath of the swamplands in his nostrils and when those acclaimed words along the waterfront reminded him of the Honduran forests who he wished the very sky.

It was in Egypt that he became desperately homesick, for there he heard a ship in trade talk blowing through cocoanut palms and the languid surge of a Caribbean surf. She was in his mind, lastly. He was well and there was work to do. Cattle had been exported to countries and was hungry for the new. The Caribs were calling him.

He returned to Honduras eager to take up his burden where he had dropped it, almost nine years before, in this he had difficulty.

He had planned the fruit business almost too carefully, it seemed; he had put it together so skillfully that it functioned with admirable smoothness, and furthermore during that seven years of complete concentration on the railroad job it had grown away from him, after a fashion.

Although he resumed charge of production he found that Saunders and several others, too, knew more about it than he, and all had a background of technical training which he could never hope to acquire.

Irked by Details

Appreciating his own limitations, Steve adapted himself to them as best he could and tried hard to find some job that needed doing and which was of a size and an importance to suit him.

He invented a few, but not many. As time passed he became more and more of a figurehead, a symbol of what the company had once been.

Details irked him, he was not an office executive; he looked elsewhere for another railroad to build, another patriot to join. Unhappily there were none.

That old restlessness still rode him, periodically he disappeared for weeks on exploratory or reconnoitering trips and whether he still carried on with that Mayan woman Hannah never knew. When he laced his boots and buckled on his machete she realized with a tardy resignation that the pagan Pentecost had her husband by the hand and would lead him to far places which she would never see. It was useless to try and tame that other Steve.

Occasionally he appeared unexpectedly at Montgomery's headquarters and the two cronies would sit until all hours, drinking and smoking much, talking a little. Next to Saunders, Montgomery was now the strongest prop the company had.

The time came when only Reggie and Hannah Pentecost understood why Steve still clung to his hold upon the fruit business. It was, of course, because of his son.

The Chief never tired of talking about Steve, Junior. He had finished college . . . He had stepped directly into the Boston office . . . Dan Marchand had made him his assistant . . . He was showing great aptitude and it was Dan's intention to teach him all there was to know about every branch of the fruit business

Steve, Senior, reported finally to Montgomery that the boy had gone to New Orleans. It wouldn't be long now until he came home to tackle production. Then, between them, they'd complete his education. A year at Cortez should fit him to be vice-president in charge of production. After that —president!

Well, the proud father had determined to turn over an empire to his son and it was ready, waiting. If Stevie held up his present gait, he'd be the youngest chief executive of a great company on record.

Montgomery heard next that the young prince had met a girl; a fine girl, the daughter of rich and prominent people. Hannah fancied they were engaged and she was delighted.

"A fine marriage would establish him socially and—finish the job, eh?" He grinned at his friend.

"Unfortunately I kept my hands off the boy and allowed him to make his own way without interference. He's got the stuff in him; one job will be to temper it and give it a cutting edge. The jungle is strong. I broke it down with my bare hands, but it'll take a man to keep it down. I'm wondering if Dan and the Boston crowd have made him too—soft."

"He'll soon harden, if he's like you."

"That's the point. I scarcely know the kid and I fancy he's more like Hannah than me. God! What'll happen to this business when I'm gone, Montgomery?"

With a nervous laugh the young husband said:

"Well, how it is! I hope you can manage to endure it."

"Why, it's lovely!" Alice cried. "I'm a bit disappointed to find it's so modern. I mean I expected something—Spanish. Only for those palms and the amazing blue of the sky and the ocean it might be a town in the Middle West."

"Mother has a mid-western mind," Steve told her. "This is all here, you know. She planned it; built it. That's the largest and best-equipped hospital in the tropics; his staff couldn't be finer.

"And see how clean everything is. Cleanliness is more than a hobby here, it's a creed, a religion. Health is compulsory, so don't ever get a headache."

Rockingham Parable, The Ant and The Grasshopper

Austen Lake

He is glad to earn a small coin for tack-room chores, like oiling harness, manicuring the animals, doing chamber work in the stalls or hustling green feed.

For Buddy, now 40, has gone back to his early beginnings, where he started before he became a leading money jockey, the coddled darling of lipstick ladies, on whose narrow shoulders money rained.

Of the fortune he made he has nothing left and the wine of old living is sour in his mouth. So he forks straw as a stable swipe again and dreams futile thoughts of a comeback.

He never touched his pants to saddle leather from barrier to finish, and had the knack of lifting his horses by the neck, like an angel salvaging a sinner's soul. So the veterans say.

Ant Aids Grasshopper

AND ONCE, IN THE old days, while riding for August Belmont, Buddy bought a $75,000 mansion at Saratoga, a gingerbread palace trimmed with gilt and crystal.

He had a fleet of expensive motors, bales of 5th avenue clothes, diamond gauds and a taste for champagne.

As a stable mate, in those days, he had an unassuming lad named Clarence Turner, who was never a large stake winner. But what Clarence made he saved. And what he saved he invested. He owned no marble palaces, no motor jewelry and was bashful in the presence of polychromed ladies.

So now, at Rockingham, Clarence is training a public stable. He is a shrewd lad with a growing reputation. The flats and angles of his riding day are curves and bulges now. For he is 40, too.

Sometimes he hires Ensor to gallop a nag in the early dawn, both for the sake of stretching the animal's legs and to give Buddy, fortune's old darling, the price of a breakfast.

Divine Spark, Human Lump

THE PAWTUCKET MEMORIAL HOSPITAL has discharged Johnny Fanning. There are lint bandages, soaked in carron oil around his arms, and pretty soon Johnny, who is a fat, dumpish man with a flaccid face and a slumbering eye, will go back to work as a laborer at the Narragansett track.

To look at Johnny, a natural day-dreamer who roosts on the infield rails with a straw in his mouth, you would never suspect that his clumsy body hides a divine spark.

A little while ago, a tractor driver named Jimmy Callahan, had finished his job of harrowing the dirt saucer. He had run his motor hard and it was hot.

So when, according to custom, Jimmy pulled up at the fuel pump and began to squirt gasoline into his tractor tank, some of it sprayed on the overheated manifold.

In an instant Jimmy's clothes were a mass of flame. He became a living torch, running aimlessly toward the infield.

It was then that Johnny's latent heroism awoke. He slid off his perch and raced after Jimmy, wrestled him to the ground and stripped off pants and jumper to save the lad's life.

Jimmy went to the hospital with 1st degree burns. Johnny's burns were second degree, but he will carry scars on his arms and chest for life.

Can't Take It!

IT IS AN ODD WEAKNESS of people who profess the character of hard-boiled ribbers, critics who shovel ridicule and derision on a lavish scale, are, a heart, most sensitive to criticism, and will curdle and sulk when they have to take their own dosage.

Dizzy Dean, master mocker of baseball, who loves to barbecue the other fellow, is pouting after Frank Frisch's verbal spanking and wants to be traded.

The Great Art Shires, who had a flamboyant, drug store color with a shoddy underlying body and indifferent athletic talents, was like that.

Red Sox Herrings

ONE THING EDDIE COLLINS has not learned since coming to wet nurse the Red Sox. That is to place confidence in Boston newsmen. He hugs his counsel close to his chest, sometimes even smoking the trail to draw the news hounds off the scent.

Thus, immediately before the Lefty Grove deal, Boston writers were flagged by the Red Sox office, and mislead to believe that there was no dicker on the fire. And so since Eddie seems to have no confidence in Boston writers, the writers in turn seem to have no confidence in him as a dispenser of information.

Which may explain much of the strophe and antistrophe now taking place on the Jimmy Foxx report.

Now one does not expect a ball club to tip its hand prematurely, or have its inner secrets still-born in print. But previous baseball administrations in Boston have worked closely with Boston newsmen, both morning and afternoon, and never had a confidence betrayed.

The advantage in such procedure is that the news gatherers refrain from shotgun speculation, get a uniform break on stories, save themselves and the club embarrassment and halt backstairs snooping.

Thomson, Parks Tied in Lead

Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, June 8—Faltering again after a fine start, Jimmy Thomson of Long Beach, Calif., lost a four stroke lead over Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and trailed the home town favorite today by a stroke, with only nine holes to go, on the final round of the U. S. Open Golf Championship.

Parks, out in 38 with a great rally had 261 for 63 holes. Thomson, out in 39, totalled 262.

Eight players, paced by Thomson of California and Parks, were bunched within four strokes of each other today at the conclusion of the third round.

Thomson and Parks each had 223 and were tied at 54 holes. Parks faltered at the outset of his fourth round, as did Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, who had moved into third place with 224.

The veteran Walter Hagen, staging a dramatic rally, shot a 72 for his third round and a total of 226, moving into a tie for fourth with Alvin Kreuger.

Kreuger had a third round 73, duplicating the score of Gene Sarazen, who lost ground to the leaders as he posted a 76-hole total of 227.

Also at 227 were Denney Shute of Chicago, who had a third round 73, and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., who came roaring back into the picture with a 70, two under par and the best round of the tournament.

Thomson had three straight birdies after a six on the first hole, but thereafter he was highly erratic. The Californian was bunkered on three of the remaining holes and three-putted three others.

The battle for the title, which filed from the grasp of Olin Dutra of Los Angeles, tightened up for an exciting stretch drive in the fourth round this afternoon.

Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, the tournament bridegroom, moved up within a stroke of the pacesetters by carding a third round 72 for a total of 224.

Henry Picard, lanky professional from Hershey, Pa., and biggest money winner of the winter circuit, capitalized on electrifying first nine in 33, four under par, to post a 70, two below par, for his third round.

It was the best score of the tournament, by a single stroke, and gave Picard a 54-hole total of 227, leaving him only four shots behind the leaders.

Gene Sarazen finished badly, taking a 78 for his third round, but posting a 54-hole total of 227, tieing Picard and Denny Shute of Chicago, who had a third round 73.

Olin Dutra saw his last lingering chance of keeping the title vanish when he posted a third round 77 for a total of 231. He was trailing by eight strokes and out of the picture.

Olin Dutra was unable to make any headway with his 78 on the third round. He had his worst trouble around the greens and carded 78—231.

Starting his fourth round while many others were still struggling to complete the morning test, Ray Mangrum went one under par when he chipped dead for a birdie on the long fourth but then tossed away three strokes on the next two holes.

He three-putted the fifth from 40 feet for a five. He took two to get out of a trap on the short sixth, carding another five.

MANGAN MARK OF 3:01.4 Sets 3-4 Mile

By Associated Press

New York, June 8—Joe Mangan, former Cornell star, an added starter in the three-quarter mile special of the 134th spring games of the New York A. C. today, swept past Chuck Hornbostel of Indiana in a stirring dash up the homestretch to win in 3:01.4, a new American record for the distance.

Gene Venske of Pennsylvania, who set the old American standard of 3:02.7 last year, cut out the pace most of the way but Hornbostel moved into the lead as they entered the final lap.

Latin School Whips English

Buddy McLaughlin Star of Victory

Boston Public Latin School defeated English High 12 to 11 at Billings Field, Roslindale this morning. The result was a big upset as English was favored to win.

With the score tied 11 all going into the ninth inning, Buddy McLaughlin, star Latin infielder, singled, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice and scored on a squeeze play, to win the game.

Rosamond Vahey Retains Golf Title

By Bill Grimes

Miss Rosamond Vahey of Vesper Country Club of Lowell defeated Miss Deborah Verry of Tatnuck, Worcester, 3 and 2, today in the finals of the Women's Golf Association championship at the Brae Burn Country Club.

Miss Vahey in the first champion succeeding to defend her title in this championships since Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr.—Oakley, accomplished that feat at Charles River six years ago.

Miss Verry was four holf the stroke play medal winning at Brae Burn for the first time four years ago, and regaining it last year at Winchester.

Miss Vahey was away to a very poor start on the first, for the fact that Miss Verry was not putting up to her usual form would have had considerable trouble regaining her championship.

Other than her poor work on the greens and some questionable judgment at the 10th and 12th holes, Miss Verry might have acquired the title. She outhit the champion off the tees, and more than held her own through the fairways.

Miss Verry missed a golden opportunity at the first hole where she slipped up on a short putt for a win. At the next hole a pushed second shot which went down the hill to the right of the green caused Miss Vahey eventually to pick up, conceding the hole to her opponent.

Miss Verry gave the champion the third hole by missing another short putt, but she went to one up again at the long fourth. There Miss Vahey was trapped in two and had played six when she finally escaped.

Two Down at Turn

After they had halved the fifth and sixth holes with par figures, Miss Verry pulled her second shot at the seventh. She had played four before she got on, losing the hole to a five after missing another holeable putt.

At the short eighth Miss Verry took three to get down from just off the edge of the green. A poor second at the ninth from the rough made her two down at the turn.

A bad hook off the tenth tee started her on her way to a seven to be three down, but she picked up a hole at the short 12th, where Miss Vahey three-putted.

Miss Verry came up with another seven at the 13th, where she topped her second, pulled her third into a trap and took two to get out.

At the long 14th Miss Vahey missed her second shot and lost the hole to a par five, but she came back at the 15th, where Miss Verry was in the rough from the tee, to be dormie three.

The match ended on the 16th green, where Miss Verry missed holing out a chip shot for a three by inches.

Boston Boat Starts Race To Norway

By Associated Press

Aboard U. S. C. G. Cutter Argo, off Newport, June 8.—With a heavy bank of fog sweeping in to meet them, six trim yachts slid across the starting line shortly after noon (E.S.T.), today, in a race that will carry them across the Atlantic from Newport to Norway.

The six yachts crossed the line off Brenton reef on the starboard tack with yawl Stormy Weather, owned by Philip Le Boutillier of New York, at the leeward end of the line and the ketch Vamarie, owned by Vadim S. Makaroff of New York, on her weather quarter.

The schooner Mistress, George Roosevelt of New York owner, drew the weather berth with the other three yachts in between.

These three were the ketch Hamrah, owned by Robert R. Ames of Boston; the schooner Vagabond of Roger G. Robinson, New Haven, Ct., and the yawl Stoertebeker, owned by Ludwig Schlimbach of Hamburg, Germany.

The wind was from the south with a velocity of about 12 miles an hour as the yachts started on their 2000-mile trip, with the finish line at Marsteinen Light at the entrance to Kors Fjord, near Bergen, Norway.

Bally Bay Choice in 1st Monday

By Dave Wilson
(Selections Made For Fast Track)
BEST BET—HAPPY KNOT, 4TH

FIRST—BALLY BAY, QUEEN VIC, CABOUSE

PP	Horse	Wt.	Jockey	P. Odds	Comment
2	Queen Vic	..108	C. Hanford	..5-1	Second to Flagbearer.
4	Great Haste	..108	Sage	..10-1	Improved.
5	Tody West	..107	Knott	..10-1	Well backed Saturday.
7	Dark Devil	..108	Deering	..15-1	Improvement needed.
8	Pekin	..105	Stout	..20-1	Shows it rarely.

BALLY BAY shaped up as the class here. The Haymaker colorbearer displayed high speed while racing in better company last time out. QUEEN VIC, second to Flagbearer, is strictly the one to fear. CABOUSE figures close up.

SECOND—STAR CHASE, CANCEL, BALMACAN

SECOND RACE—Three-year-olds and up, claiming, $800, six furlongs.

3	Starchase	..108	Faust	..5-1
5	Carroll	..111	Knisely	..3-1
1	Balmacan	..108	Wholley	..3-1
2	Da Vyera	..106	Johnson	..6-1
9	Wee Tone	..108	Knott	..15-1
7	Upper Holes	..105	Fallon	..20-1
8	Outbound	..113	Wagner	..15-1
4	Weedkill	..104	Sabo	..15-1
6	Weedkill	..104	Gumbo	..15-1

Shooting for a price here and expect to get it STAR CHASE runs to top form. The Purchase mare's recent Belmont and Maryland efforts may be tossed into discard. She was up against it. CANCEL, fresh and good, shapes up as strictly the one to fear. BALMACAN is a longshot possibility with a fighting chance.

THIRD—SANDY MACK, TUGBOAT FRANK, DREAM KISS

THIRD RACE—Two-year-olds, claiming, $1000, five furlongs.

6	Sandy Mack	..112	Ladley	..5-1
2	Tugboat Frank	..108	Deering	..3-1
3	Dream Kiss	..105	Wagner	..5-1
5	Absconder	..113	Wall	..6-1
1	Mr. Numbers	..110	Knott	..8-1
4	Mad Dash	..110	C. Hanford	..15-1

SANDY MACK'S most recent effort is all that can be desired. The Gratton colorbearer picked up 118 pounds to win as his rider pleased that day. TUGBOAT FRANK, off general form, looms all over the danger. DREAM KISS is reported on razor edge by the clockers.

FOURTH—HAPPY KNOT, CANDY MAID, CHARACTER

4	Happy Knot	..108	Knott	..5-2
6	Candy Maid	..103	Wagner	..5-1
1	Character	..113	C. Hanford	..6-1
3	Wise Anne	..108	Harvard	..6-1
5	Erin Lad	..110	Kacala	..6-1
2	Sandy Lass	..110	Ladley	..8-1
8	Chinese Empress	..108	Deering	..8-1
7	Cloud Sweeper	..110	Wall	..20-1

FIFTH—JESSIE D. M., IMMUNE, FLAGBEARER

FIFTH RACE—Three-year-olds and up, claiming, $800, 5½ furlongs.

11	Jessie D. M.	..107	Trueheart	..6-1
1	Immune	..109	Trueheart	..4-1
2	Flagbearer	..110	Knisely	..3-1
3	Dancing Lady	..108	Sabo	..4-1
4	Tryon	..110	Faust	..6-1
5	Ben Ali	..112	C. Hanford	..8-1
6	On Our Way	..110	Wall	..10-1
7	Advocate Junior	..114	Wagner	..15-1
9	Gay Crest	..102	Johnson	..15-1
10	Camp Parole	..106	Gumbo	..15-1
8	Debbie	..104	Knott	..30-1
12	Dorothy	..104	Sullivan	..30-1

JESSIE D. M. is dropping down where she can hardly miss. The Master Charlie filly displayed high speed in much better company last trip. IMMUNE, main danger, was a galloping winner last trip. FLAGBEARER for the remainder.

SIXTH—IDLE ALONG, PRINCE POMPEY, FREE

1	Idle Along	..108	Wall	..3-1
3	Prince Pompey	..114	Wall	..8-5
2	Free	..106	Ladley	..4-1
6	Honey Sweet	..110	Ladley	..5-1
5	Northlake	..110	Harvard	..6-1
4	Mad Wind	..107	C. Hanford	..8-1
8	Sir Jacobus	..110	Knisely	..10-1
7	Zap	..106	Sage	..12-1

IDLE ALONG figures to reverse the tables on PRINCE POMPEY under the weight arrangements. Only a short neck separated them last time. FREE is good right now and may upset the dope.

SEVENTH—BILLOWY WAVE, FRIAR MARK, GOLDFIN

10	Billowy Wave	..107	Knott	..4-1
9	Friar Mark	..112	Gilbert	..4-1
8	Goldfin	..101	Wagner	..6-1
12	Friend Whitey	..109	Harvard	..6-1
7	Five Reel	..112	Wimmer	..8-1
6	Calgary Kay	..112	Faust	..8-1
3	Wrel Star	..108	Szabo	..8-1
5	Lynwod	..108	Deering	..10-1
11	Sunterno	..108	C. Hanford	..10-1
1	Lucky Break	..112	Greer	..15-1
4	Count Dean	..112	Knisely	..12-1
2	Sky Boy	..104	Sullivan	..20-1

Going to try and wake up BILLOWY WAVE in this affair. Tom Gegnano colorbearer stands an excellent chance off best races. FRIAR MARK and GOLDFIN shape up as the main dangers. They are fancied as named.

EIGHTH—GUIDING LIGHT, THE POTTER, OGLE

6	Guiding Light	..112	Knott	..5-2
5	The Potter	..117	Ladley	..3-1
8	Ogle	..107	Wagner	..5-1
4	Dancing Mark	..117	Fallon	..8-1
3	Sunday Money	..112	Harvard	..8-1
1	Helen Bob	..104	Johnson	..8-1
2	Plumas	..112	Sabo	..10-1
7	Xenery	..117	Allen	..15-1

x—Apprentice allowance claimed.

GUIDING LIGHT, a cracking victor last time, has only to run back to that effort in order to be the first to catch the judge's eye. THE POTTER turned in a bangup second to Dancing Mack last time out. He shapes up as strictly the one to fear. OGLE'S most recent effort was entirely too poor to be true.

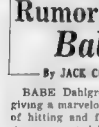
Mr. Boston Foxx RumorSpurs Babe

By JACK CONWAY

BABE Dahlgren has been giving a marvelous exhibition of hitting and fielding since it was reported he was to be sent to the Athletics along with $50,000 for Jimmy Foxx.

Babe got three hits in the opening game of the series with the Yankees. His double knocked in the winning run.



Mr. Boston

Dahlgren has always been rated as a fine fielder. The only doubt about his baseball future has been in regard to his batting.

A first baseman is expected to hit at least .275. It looks as if the Babe is determined to prove he can hit as well as field.

* * *

Foxx, however, has been a headliner for a great many years and will pass out of the baseball picture while Dahlgren is still showing to advantage.

Baseball trades at the best are a gamble. Picking winning ball players is almost as difficult as it is to call them right at the race track.

* * *

Walter Riley won a hat full of money at Rockingham on Friday. He picked five winners in his sections, and, strange to relate, was only touted off one of them.

* * *

McCOY'S FUTURE

IF AL McCoy of Dorchester can get past Al Gainor of Hartford in their 10-round bout at the Garden on next Thursday night, he will be well on his way to a bout with Bob Olin for the world light heavyweight championship.

* * *

"I would like to see a New England boy win a worlds title before I finish my term as president of the National Boxing Association," Foster told me. "I shall insist that McCoy get a crack at the title if he can keep winning.

"Al is taking on first class opposition in Al Gainor. The latter is a fine right hand puncher, and is liable to stop anybody he can stick on the chin.

"I have told Maxie Rosenbloom he cannot expect a return title go until he first defeats McCoy. At the proper time I shall notify Olin he will have to meet McCoy or stand suspended.

"McCoy has the boxing skill and wallop to become a champion. He is young and believes he can beat all-comers. I shall give him his opportunity. I shall be at the ringside when McCoy takes on Gainor".

* * *

Andy Callahan of Lawrence will return to the finite wars when he opposes Joe Ricciotti of the North End in another ten-round bout on the same card.

MILK FUND

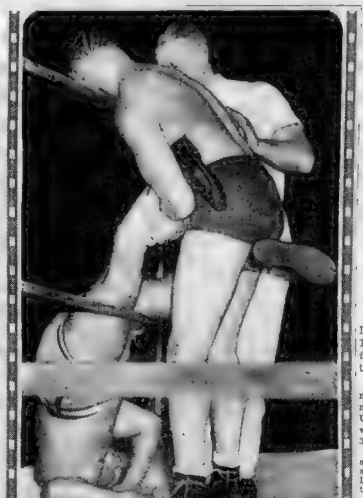
Curley has passed up a June day so as not to conflict with either the Beer-Braddock bout on June 13 or the Louis-Carnera match on June 25.

DANNO WINS

AND THEY SAID DANNO COULDN'T GO HALF AN HOUR

TIPS DeGLANE IN 65 MINUTES



DeGLANE DANNO

Here DeGlane goes tumbling out of the ring at exciting moment of bout with Dan O'Mahoney at the Garden. Danno won in one fall.

15,000 SEE PET HOLD BEAT HENRI

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney today levelled his big guns on Jim Londos and Ed Don George as a result of his victory over Henri DeGlane before 15,000 fans at the Garden.

The Irish champion won from DeGlane in a one-fall match in 1 hour 5 minutes. He used his famous "Irish Whip" to down the sturdy Frenchman.

DeGlane gave O'Mahoney the most severe opposition the Irishman has had since he came to the United States. He is the first wrestler who has lasted more than 30 minutes with Danno.

Henri matched his great strength and marvelous skill against the aggressiveness and power of Danno. DeGlane was dangerous at times.

On several occasions it looked as if he were going to be the first grappler to down O'Mahoney since the latter started out in quest of the heavyweight championship.

Danno, in winning in 1h. 5m., proved he can go the long route and still maintain his fire. At the half way mark I thought O'Mahoney was a bit tired, but as the match progressed he picked up in speed. He was traveling at a terrific clip at the hour mark.

DANNO SMART

DeGlane broke clear from three "Irish Whips" during the first hour. He either backed away against the ropes or kicked Danno in the stomach in order to break the hold.

O'Mahoney was obliged to deviate from his usual tactics to gain the winning toss. When he first applied the "Irish Whip," he didn't attempt to run with DeGlane.

Then O'Mahoney pulled DeGlane to his feet, whirled him across the ring, pulled him to the canvas and pinned him.

THE PRELIMS

Karl Pojello of Cleveland won from John Spellios of Providence in 11 m. 4 s., with a sitting body press.

Stanley Strack of Oklahoma upset Frank Sexton of Ohio in 7 m 50 s. with a reverse top body press.

20,000 Jam Race TRACK

By WALTER KILEY

Rockingham Park, N. H., June 8—A crowd of more than 20,000 milled around grandstand and clubhouse this afternoon as Rockingham's finest program of races during the 22-day-old spring meeting broke away from the barrier.

The long shot betters went wild as Foreign Lady, Cherokee Sa, and Yenoor, the latter two horses 9th shots, romped home in that order in the second race.

Foreign Lady, given a fine hand ride by Jockey Stout, paid $15.40, Cherokee al paid $102.90 for place, and $35.80 for show, the largest prices of the meeting while Yenoor rewarded his show backers with $23.60.

West Junior, 2—1 favorite, and Sandy Bill, a popular choice, raced head and head into the home lane in the third event but Sandy Bill faltered in the driving stretch duel, while the six-year-old son of Westy Hogan crossed the finish line a length to the good over Paradin which came fast to snatch the place by three englhs over Twenty Karat.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's entry of Winter Sport and Postage Due paraded through to a 1—2 victory in the $5000 added juvenile handicap. Bea Biscuit took show money.

Fall in Parachute

Flyer Tangled With 'Plane Has Very Narrow Escape

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

FLOYD GIBBONS

How would you like to step out of a plane several thousand feet in the air with a parachute strapped on to your shivering body and then just as you started your first jump find that Fate had chosen you for an accident?

Wow! What a thrill! And how few live to tell it! I've seen flyers and balloon observers "bail out" and, by golly, every time I see one drop into space I think I'm more frightened than the jumper.

I always hold my breath—in those few seconds before the chute opens—and then sigh with relief when the merciful silk spreads out, like a big mushroom and floats gently down.

Joe Baltric was a student at the Air Corps School of Parachute Rigging when he was called upon to make the "live jump" that all students make voluntarily before graduation. They call them "live jumps" in the Air Corps but Joe says he came very near being a dead one.

With four other students Joe took off from Chanute Field at Rantoul, Ill. on June 5, 1931 to make their "maiden" jumps. The boys went up in five O-38 planes. Joe says flying in formation.

The other four made their jumps without incident and Joe saw them all and thought it would be a cinch. When it came his turn he swallowed the lump in his throat, stepped into space and pulled the cord of the chute.

The chute opened but instead of floating free in the air Joe felt a sudden tug and heard a ripping sound and looking up saw to his horror that the shrouds had fouled the plane and he HUNG SUSPENDED FROM THE TIP OF THE PLANE'S WING!

Any aviator knows what a desperate situation pilot and jumper were now in. Joe saw that the Parachute impeded the movement of the "flipper" and knew at once that the plane could never land without that control.

The pilot knew it, too. Of course, he could have jumped—and saved himself—but they don't do things like that in the Air Corps.

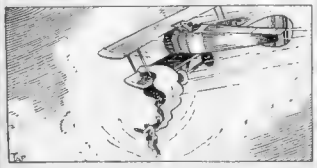
Even if the plane did make a landing he was certain to be dashed to death on the hard ground and he saw that his chute was so damaged that it would no longer support him.

Well, sir, down on the ground those hard-boiled flyers had seen the predicament of flyer and jumper and were getting their heads together. Joe could see them rushing around and finally he saw a plane take off. It didn't give him much hope though because he couldn't figure what they could do for him. So he just hung there and waited for death.

The worst of it was, Joe could see that his plane was gradually losing height—only the powerful "Conqueror" engine was keeping it from crashing. The pilot was having a hands full keeping the stick up as Joe's body cut down the speed in half. And Joe, meantime, was swinging crazily around and around like a top on a string and getting so sea-sick that he didn't care what happened.



It seemed to take hours for that other plane to come along side of them but, when it did, Joe says, he felt a lot better. Somebody had chalked "follow me" on the fuselage of the other plane and Joe's pilot was doing the best he could to obey. Joe recognized the flyers in the second plane—they waved encouragement to him and he waved back—a last salute to the dead!

The other plane maneuvered into a position above Joe and the man in the rear cockpit started lowering something on a string. Joe couldn't make out what it was for a few minutes—he was swinging so—but, as the object came nearer, he saw that it was a BUTCHER KNIFE.

THAT MEANT ORDERS TO CUT HIMSELF LOOSE!

A piece of delicate flying followed as the pilot of the plane above tried to bring the swinging knife within Joe's reach. Joe grabbed at it several times and then an air current would snatch it from him.

It seemed to Joe that this went on for hours—it did last for over half an hour—when finally the knife struck Joe in the chest and he grabbed AND HELD ON. The string broke and floated away. IT WAS UP TO HIM NOW.

Joe held the knife firmly and looked at the shrouds of his chute. "Shrouds" was a good name for those cords, he thought, then he raised his arm—held his breath—and drew the sharp knife across them. The strands parted. Joe fell.

Down, down, down, his body shot straight for the earth as he turned over and over in his fall Joe could see the hangars beneath him. He mumbled a prayer.

And then, boys and girls, Joe pulled the cord of his emergency chute and floated safely to Mother Earth.

Come to think of it, I guess I didn't mention before that he had a second chute but you see Joe didn't mention it either until the end of his story and I—well, I thought it was a secret.

Thanks Joe and thanks, you other guys out there that day at Chanute Field, for your quick thinking, and I guess that how as many heroic things happen in the air in peace time as they do during war.

HOLLAND

LAVISH "In Caliente" Opens at Met

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Director Lloyd Becon and Busby Berkeley, the dance director whose creations seem to have failed to startle, confuse, and delight an unsuspecting public, have bent every effort to make this film a smart and light-hearted excursion into music and romance. And they have succeeded.

The effort is further backed up by an excellent cast which includes lovely Dolores Del Rio, Pat O'Brien, Leo Carrillo, Edward Everett Horton, Wini Shaw and a host of other amiable people.

George Holland

The Del Marcos, a graceful, smoothly working dance couple with an international reputation, are also among those present.

* * *

The plot of the piece is as fluffy as the production itself. Pat O'Brien is the editor of a smart New York magazine, of the kind that are known as "slicks" to the trade. His weaknesses are cardinal enough: liquor and a mercenary blonde.

His backer, the delightful Edward Everett Horton, gets him drunk, kidnaps him, and takes him to Agua Caliente for a rest cure. One wonders, why Agua Caliente?

At any rate, the editor promptly falls in love with Dolores Del Rio—as who wouldn't—but Dolores has other plans. It seems that the editor has panned her recent New York appearance, where she was known simply as Espanita.

Messrs. Warren and Dubin, and Dixon and Wrubel have injected some first rate songs into this production. "The Lady in Red" is already a hit, and much is hoped for "Carioca" and "In Caliente."

* * *

The stage show at the Met this week brought a happy surprise. She is Ruth Sato, a small and pretty Japanese, and a beautiful dancer in the bargain.

She does a striking number in which she is lured from traditional Oriental dances to Broadway hotcha and back again.

She's very much at home in both, and everyone liked her. This young woman is going places.

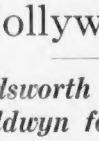
Hollywood Gossip

Dodsworth Bought by Goldwyn for $150,000

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, June 8—The record price for the year was paid for a motion picture when Samuel Goldwyn bought "Dodsworth" at a sum said to be considerably over $150,000.

"Dodsworth" is the play based on Sinclair Lewis' book which has done such a tremendous business for the last two years in New York.



Louella O. Parsons

Walter Huston, in the lead, achieved one of the greatest successes of any actor in the last few years. Nearly every film company in the business put in a bid, but Sam Goldwyn closed the deal today over the long distance telephone.

Walter Huston, who has a contract with British Gaumont for one picture, will undoubtedly come to Hollywood to play the lead. You just couldn't think of "Dodsworth" without Walter Huston, and I'd like to see Fay Bainter in the part she created on the stage. Sidney Howard will write the adaptation.

* * *

Michael Bartlett, whose rich tenor voice thrilled all those who saw the preview of Grace Moore's picture, "Love Me Forever," is hurrying back from the East. Michael has been summoned to play opposite Claudette Colbert in "She Married Her Boss," which goes into production at Columbia Studios on Monday.

Playing the lead opposite Claudette Colbert is certainly a step toward the goal of stardom which Harry Cohn has set for Bartlett. This is Claudette's first picture since her holiday in New York and her first for the Columbia lot since "It Happened One Night."

Melvyn Douglas will have one of the leading roles and Jean Dixon will be seen in a featured spot. Gregory La Cava, who made so many best selling films last year, will direct.

* * *

We have in our midst a child prodigy by the name of Bobby Breen, who at the age of eight is a lyric tenor. Sol Lesser heard the child sing at the home of Dr. Marshutti, the coach of Carusa, Grace Moore and other operatic stars. Bobby sang the aria, "La Donna Mobile" from "Rigoletto" and so enchanted Sol that he promptly put him under contract. A special story will be written in which the little boy will have a chance to sing. Sol is so popped up as he was when years ago he put Jackie Coogan under contract.

* * *

I must say the first assignment given Josef Von Sternberg as a Columbia director is a pretentious one. He will be handed the toughest assignment of the year, the direction of Peter Lorre in "Crime and Punishment." I say tough because Dostoievsky's story is exceedingly dramatic and difficult. But Joe has made good pictures and there is no reason why this shouldn't be a top-notcher, what with Harry Cohn and Sam Briskin sitting at the helm.

* * *

For over a year, twelve months count them, we have been reading about the Marx Brothers' operatic comedy. Then nothing happened and people sort of forgot that the Marx Brothers had in mind the making of a movie. Now Walter King (you used to know him as Walter Woolf) is to have the singing role in "A Night at the Opera," the title of the Marx Brothers' movie. Walter, who sings baritone, is supposed to have the role of a tenor but because the Marxs, all three of them, liked his voice the boys will forget the tenor and make the singer a baritone.

'Mr. Dynamite'

Thrills

Lowe Stars At RKO

By MARTIN HANNON

Another of Dashiell Hammett's par-boiled detectives has come to a Boston screen.

This time it is Edmund Lowe in "Mr. Dynamite," appearing at the RKO Boston Theater this week, with "Strangers All," featuring Preston Foster and May Robson, as the co-feature.

Mr. Dynamite, nee T. W. Thompson, is a very hard, very glib, tramp detective, thrown out of one town after another for getting under the large splay feet of local police departments.

Matters are complicated as Dynamite, snooping about the grounds of the pianist's estate, finds Lewis' daughter trying to escape the house. She bites the detective in the hand when he tries to hold her; and love burgeons in his breast.

Dynamite gets into a lot of trouble keeping the girl in hiding from the police. And his jealous secretary threatens trouble as she looks with a cold, clammy eye on her younger and prettier rival.

But it all ends well, with Dynamite solving the case, and getting thrown out of town again, secretary and all. The latter wins out, by the way, when Dynamite gives the little Lewis girl some fatherly advice about falling in love with itinerant sleuths.

"Strangers All" is a pleasant and sentimental domestic drama, with May Robson as the harried mother of a tyro actor, a radical, and a promising young business man. The latter, almost needless to say, is the only one who works for a living. The daughter of the house is at a girls' college.

The Twain Meet

Joe Brown Makes Hit at Scollay

An attractive double feature offered at the Scollay Square Theater this week, with Joe E. Brown in the picturization of Ring Lardner's "Alibi Ike" sharing the program with Bette Davis in "The Girl from 10th Avenue."

Joe E. Brown, as Alibi Ike, the ball player addicted to every form of apology on record, is in his best style. Ike apologizes himself into an engagement, and out of it again. It seems that the team-captain's sister takes all his alibis for modesty; but she calls the engagement off when Ike alibis the engagement ring he gave her.

In the doldrums of love, however, Ike bats for the size of his collar button, as the ball scribes have it, and the girl is tricked by his team-mates into seeing him again for the sake of the approaching World's Series.

In "The Girl from 10th Avenue," Bette Davis is Miriam Brady who marries out of her caste and has a lot of woe trying to climb to the next rung of the social ladder. Ian Hunter, Colin Clive, and Alison Skipworth are among the able players included in the cast.

Strong Bill Presented in Orpheum

A new variety bill, headlining Miss Dorothy Kay, popular New York radio singer, is at the Loew's Orpheum Theater, along with the first down-town showings of "Age of Indiscretion," featuring Paul Lukas and Madge Evans.

Miss Kay is a blues singer with a powerful voice; and her efforts received a generous reward from the Orpheum audience. She was called back for an encore of "St. Louis Blues."

"Dance Fantasia" was offered by Gracella and Theodore, a graceful dancing couple with some novel ideas. The French Revolutionary episode of their dance suite was particularly well received.

The comedy of the program was in the hands of Joe May and his attractive partner, Louise Troxell. In addition, another young man played Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" on a harmonica, and, as though that were not enough, displayed further talents in a lively tap dance.

* * *

"The Age of Indiscretion" is an entertaining film story of an idealistic publisher who loses his selfish wife only to find his stenographer more than willing to assume the responsibility of caring for him and his young son. Paul Lukas is good as the publisher, and Madge Evans very charming as his secretary.

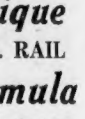
BANKERS GIVEN

Unique
N. E. RAIL
Formula

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The banking fraternity is taking an active interest in the New England rail situation. Up until now the matter has received widest discussion in political and editorial circles.

Colonel Allan M. Pope, president of the Piers Boston Corp., presented a unique plan for solution of present difficulties of New England carriers to the Massachusetts Bankers' Association, which this calls for unified operation. The essence of the proposal is to create a new company. All common stock would be issued by the roads concerned. They would lease the needed mileage, rolling stock and terminal facilities.



Allan M. Pope

• • •

It seems to us that the suggestion of Colonel Pope should be taken up by political and financial circles with the utmost enthusiasm. Heretofore the question of what to do to help the New England rails has centered around mergers and proposals to ally carriers with other trunk lines. Here is an "at-home" solution that promises to satisfy all those who want the New England railroad problem is a local affair and must be solved from a local standpoint. At the same time economy of operation promised should tempt those who would set fire to listen to anything but trunk lines schemes.

Shorts: Shoe & Leather Reporter tells us today that the industry by and large adopted a waiting attitude during the past week . . . This is largely attributable to cautiousness characterizing shoe buying activities . . . In some Boston shoe circles there is a reporting inclination to wait and test the possibilities of downward price revisions . . . The dairy and baking industries are said to be most favorably affected by elimination of the NRA . . . While the sulphur industry is said to be worried because oil refiners have developed a process which does not need their product.

• • •

President Arthur O'Keeffe in explaining the decrease in profits of First National Stores shown in the statement released today says that wholesale profits have increased more than retail prices. It would seem that the forces working for higher prices are not first in their entirety by consumers. In order to really appreciate this it should be noted that the company actually set a high sales record in the year ending March 30, 1935, as profits struck low since 1929.

• • •

State Street Notes: The enthusiastic buying of Technicolor on reports of a forthcoming talking picture processed by the company are snaking some orders skeptical . . . They are afraid profit-taking would send the stock off quite sharply even though the picture proves quite a hit. . . The Associated Press stock averages as charted by the writer have formed a curious picture . . . All four double topped this week. . . A rare performance for all brackets in a group of averages . . . A punch through this April-May high would break this bearish formation.

BOSTON STOCKS
Are Irregular

American Gas Net Off

American Gas & Electric Co. and subsidiaries report for 12 months ended April 30, 1935, net income of 19,927,051, equal, after $6 preferred dividends, to $1.73 a share on 4,482,787 no-par shares of common stock outstanding at the close of the period, against $10,946,362, or $1.86 a share on 4,395,001 common shares in 12 months ended April 30, 1934.

MANY
BONDS HELD STEADY

By Associated Press

New York, June 8—Financial forces spent most of the past week picking the splinters of the collapsed NRA out of their backing to the conclusion that the unsettling nature of the decision did not lead to the largest temporary, and in the long run, perhaps, all for the best.

All except a few classifications of stocks scored fair gains during the week although most of the time buying was gingerly and restricted.

Most bonds pursued a steady course, with utility loans getting ahead 1/32 to 1/8 point as speculative modifications of the pending Wheeler-Rayburn bill for the abolition of holding companies appeared more clearly destined for revision in the light of the NRA court ruling.

Cotton Well Up

Corn and cotton were well up late in the week, but wheat was a laggard, largely in reflection of the better prospects for the growing crop because of weather conditions.

Business statistics indicated that at least for the time being the court's decision had not been the source of a severe setback.

Dun & Bradstreet reported that retail trade in many areas was 8% best in a number of weeks, stimulated both by seasonable weather and by gradually improving confidence. They noted good reordering in the wholesale field, but not much forward buying.

Freight car loadings were off, but in less than the usual seasonal amount, and the dip in electric power output was about on a par with the amount to be expected at this time of the year.

Steel operations, following the seasonal trend, got down 2.8 points at 30.3 per cent of capacity and automobile production was said to be stepping up for the season.

The unexpected overthrow of the Bouisson Cabinet was followed by several days of confusion which appeared to be ending as a new government was formed by Pierre Laval.

After sinking well below the point at which gold could be shipped from Paris to New York early in the week, the franc was climbing again above the gold point as the new week approached.

WOOL
ARE SMALL

The United States Department of Agriculture reported today that sales were small in the Boston wool market during the past week.

The sharply curtailed demand brought some irregularity in prices. Sizable lots were held at mostly unchanged quotations but small quantities were available at moderate concessions from recent selling prices.

Weakness was most apparent in medium wools offered from the middle west 1-2 cents in the grease from that previously being received.

Strictly combing graded Ohio wools were quoted nominally unchanged at 30-31 cents in the grease for all grades from fine to 44s. Boston basis. The bulk of the sales were on 64s and finer territory wools which brought mostly 65-70 cents, scoured basis, for bulk short to good French combing lots.

Selected Industries

Selected Industries, Inc., declared usual quarterly dividend of 87½ cents on the $5.50 prior stock, payable July 1 to stock of record June 15.

Bank Statement

IRENE BORDONI MAKES BOW IN JOLSON RADIO CAST

By N. F. T.

Another development worthy of note among listeners, is the addition of Irene Bordoni, vivacious Parisian personality, to the Al Jolson radio half hour. Irene bows in (WEEI) when that dial diversion again takes the air at 9:30 tonight.

Verily, the sound sanctum show is therefore quite star-studded, since Miss Bordoni broadcasts in company with the noted Walter Huston and Ernest Truex. Jolson is also planning to introduce a little lass named Josephine who is just eight years old, but nevertheless a champion at marbles, having topped any number of expert boy contestants in a recent New York marble competition.

CAREFREE CARNIVAL

In fancy, the artists of the "Carefree Carnival" have packed their baggage in preparation for a mystery voyage, the destination of which will be revealed with the presentation of the premiere (WBZ) coming from San Francisco this evening, at 10:30 p. m.

Although little is revealed in advance about the tip, Ted Hediger, director of the show, says that the mystery voyage is being made in the interest of radio. If the trip proves successful the cast hopes to revolutionize the conception of radio humor in a formal address at the opening of next weeks program.

* * *

Three entirely new songs—"I'll Never Say 'Never Again' Again," "Chasing Shadows," and "Seein' is Believin'"—will be heard on "The Hit Parade" of the week's fifteen most popular numbers, meaning tonight (WEEI) at 8. Findings are according to early reports from music stores and dance floors throughout the country. The same reports indicate that "Life Is a Song," which was a stellar feature of the previous program, will make a comeback.

AMATEURS AHOY!

Increased registration is noted by the backers of that local full hour of "Old Fashioned Amateur Nite" singing, as aired (WNAC) from 10 to 11 o'clock every sunday night and so conscientiously spouted by your typewriter tapping scribe here, with gestures. Heretofore the contestants have been mostly vocalists, but tomorrow night and succeeding Sunday evenings, the loudspeaker patrons are slated to hear some of the aspiring violinists, cornetists, string groups and otherwise musically inclined hopefuls hereabouts. All of which takes place now in a summer setting out under the stars over along Memorial Drive in Cambridge.

Best Bets Tonight

8:00 p. m.—WEEI—The Hit Parade, with Lennie Hayton's music, Gogo de Lys, Kay Thompson, Johnnie Hauser, Charles Carlisle, The Three Rhythm Kings and The Melody Girls.

8:45 p. m.—WAAB—"Getting the News While the Public Sleeps," by Francis P. "Tip" O'Neil.

9:30 p. m.—WEEI—Al Jolson in a variety program, with guest stars and Victor Young's orchestra.

10:30 p. m.—WNAC—Spotlight Revue, starring Alice O'Leary, Adrian O'Brien and Bobby Norris.

11:30 p. m.—WBZ—Ray Noble and his Orchestra playing music for dancing.

HADASSAH Group to Meet

Worcester, June 8—The New England Region of Hadassah will open its 13th annual convention in the Hotel Bancroft tomorrow. Delegates from more than 30 New England communities will attend. The New England part in the national scope of the movement will be considered during business sessions.

MODEL VILLAGE Land-Takers Named

Two Boston men will be appointed next week as land-takers for the housing division of the public works administration, to obtain options to the 19 acres of land on which the Harbor model village is to be erected in South Boston, it was announced today.

Obituaries

Private funeral services were to be held today for William Leonard Benedict, 75, retired partner of Kidder, Peabody & Co., who died yesterday at his home, 25 Essex road, Chestnut Hill.

Among the many honors which he received as a prominent financial expert were decorations at the hands of the Emperor of Japan and the King of Italy.

A graduate in 1888 of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he was dismissed from following professionally the career for which he trained there, due to a fear that his weakened eyesight might fail him entirely.

DR. HENRY W. BROWN

Funeral arrangements for Dr. Henry W. Brown, 78, a practising physician in Haverhill, who died yesterday at his home, 61 Brown street, in that city, will be announced later by the Merton Roberts funeral establishment in Georgetown, where the body was taken.

SAMUEL W. MOSES

The funeral of Samuel W. Moses, 84, who died yesterday at his home, 223 Union street, Portsmouth, will be conducted tomorrow afternoon from the residence.

MRS. M. R. CONNOLLY

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary R. Connolly, 79, who died yesterday at her home, 14 Oak street, Beverly Farms, will be celebrated Monday morning in St. Margaret's church.

JAMES F. MURPHY

Final rites for James F. Murphy, Attleboro ERA administrator for the past year, who died yesterday at his home, 51 Fourth street, that city, after an extended illness, will be held at his home Monday morning, followed by a requiem mass in St. John's church.

HENRY L. CORNELL

The funeral of Henry Lyman Cornell, 22, of Meadow Ridge Farm, Frost street, Framingham, who died of injuries received in an accident while he was working in Tampa, Fla., will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from St. Andrew's Episcopal church. Burial will be in Edgell Grove cemetery.

MRS. C. F. WENTWORTH

Funeral services for Mrs. Charles Francis Wentworth, 79, who died yesterday at her home, 21 Carston street, Brookline, were to be conducted today from the Church of Our Saviour, Longwood. Burial to be in the family lot in Mt. Auburn cemetery.

ROBERT H. HEARTZ

The funeral of Robert H. Hearts, 84, retired from Gilchrist company after 62 years of service, who died yesterday at his home, 1357 Clement avenue, West Roxbury, was to be held today from the Methodist Church, Park street, West Roxbury.

Radio Answers

Q—We have heard numerous reports and even read about the proposed stratosphere broadcast. When is it to be and where? Through what station?

H. L. T., of Hingham.

A—There have been two reported by radio and the newest plan awaits favorable weather conditions. Watch this page and program listings.

Q—Is that "Schlepperman" character now on the air? The man who was with Jack Benny not long ago? Is he now with Walter O'Keefe on the "Caravan" hall hour?

D. P. of Dorchester.

A—You mean Sam Hearn. No, he is appearing in public and en route to Hollywood for pictures soon. Very many than the New England communities will attend. The New England part in the national scope of the movement will be considered during business sessions.

Q—At what time does the "Let's Pretend" half hour reach these parts and on what station? It is children's diversion recommended to us by letter from Chicago—but no time is stated.

Parents, of Brookline.

A—Each Saturday morning at 10:30. It is a dramatization of well known fairy tales, with children playing the roles. It is rated high among children's offerings. WAAB is the Boston station.

Q—Is it true that announcer Ford Bond was a professional boxer in the welterweight division before he entered radio work?

Two Rounds, of Roslindale.

A—No; he was a top notcher with the sleeves off. He practically finished it, and considered taking up the fight game for a time, but then he abandoned it for active service. He will be with McNamee to assist in describing the Baer-Braddock bout next week.

Forward your radio questions to the radio editor of the Boston Evening American then watch this space for the information you seek.

Q—Is the way by your very lively radio column that "Sloopnagle and Bud" would join the Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians on the air? If you don't recall when it is to be. Will you please tell me?

C. L. R. of Clinton.

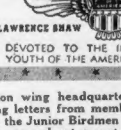
JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW NATIONAL DIRECTOR

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

Boston wing headquarters is in receipt of many interesting letters from members who say their affiliation with the Junior Birdmen has inspired them to build model planes and enter contests.

This is one of the main purposes of the Junior Birdmen and headquarters wishes to congratulate those beginners who are making such excellent progress this sport.



Robert Henneberry

"Since I have belonged to the Junior Birdmen I have won a first and a second prize in two different contests with supplies and kits approved by the Junior Birdmen Institute and stamped with the Junior Birdmen seal.

Commander Ernest Pelletier of the Kiwi Squadron of Lewiston, Me., has completed a monocoupe, a Bellanca underwing and a Moran Saulnier model and is now making a Boeing P26SE model. Merwyn Nadeau of the same squadron has made an S.E.5A model.

Stephen Tetlow, commander of the Sky Warriors of New Bedford advances an idea for bicycle adornment. Until some one else decided to acquire it, he had a splash pad one inch by eight inches on the rear of his bike.

Mrs. W. Bagley of 1174 Bay View avenue, Hough's Neck, presents many progressive mothers who are helping their air-minded youngsters. She writes:

"Yes, I have received the three wings and the boys are trying hard to get members and are eager to form a club. I will do my very best to help them out all I can. They are very proud of their wings and many thanks for them. I have them wear them on their coats so everybody can see them."

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

Membership is open to all boys and girls 10 to 21 years of age, inclusive.

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a ten-cent coir (well wrapped) for my membership materials.

JUNIOR AIRMEN RACE PLANES

With scores of boys and girls battling for handsome prizes, the second annual New England Model Plane Air Races for Junior Birdmen to decide the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser wing championship were being held today at the Playstead in Franklin Park.

The races were to consist of three events, an all-Balso glider event, a stick model event and a cabin (commercial) model event. They were to begin at 10 a. m. today and last until about 5:30 p. m. this evening with about two hours devoted to each event.

All contests were to be for endurance, the longest flights being the winning flights.

The high point scorer will receive the wing trophy and a 15-day all-expense-paid trip to Los Angeles to compete in the national tournament against 18 other champions for the William Randolph Hearst silver trophy. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to runners-up.

Best Tomorrow

10:15 a. m.—WNAC—Uncle Bob Houghton reading the Sunday Advertiser funnies.

11:30 a. m.—WBZ—Broadcast from the trawler "Hecla."

12:30 p. m.—WEEI—University of Chicago Round Table Discussion of Current Topics.

12:45 p. m.—WAAB—International Labor Conference from Geneva, Switzerland.

N. ADAMS CO-ED Wins Scholarship

The Nu Sigma Phi scholarship at the Boston University school of medicine has been awarded to Beatrice Cheraise of North Adams, Dean Alexander Begg announced Friday.

MALDEN YOUTH To Become Priest

Andrew D. V. Kelleher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Kelleher, 32 Appleton street, Malden, will be ordained to the priesthood at Portland, Me., on Saturday, June 15, by Bishop Joseph E. McCarthy.

He is a graduate of the Malden school, St. John's school at Danvers, St. Charles' College at Catonsville, Md., and the Toronto Seminary, after Kelleher will be attached to the Portland diocese after his ordination.
